Relabilished | HENRY PATERNON & CO., Publishers, 1861. | No. 319 Walnut St. Philades.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1871.

Price $2.00 m Year; or, $2.50 if paid in Advance Single Sumber & Conta.

AMONG THE MEATHER.

Wintry winds are blowing cold
O'er the moors of purple hea
Where, is sunnier days of old,
Hand in hand we idly strolled,
Thou and I together;
But those annny days are past,
And no more we walk togeth
Where the snew on every blast
Whirle shows the heather.

DENE HOLLOW

BY MRS. HENRY WOOD,

AUTHOR OF

"EAST LYNNE," &c.

[The advance sheets of this story have een purchased of Mrs. Wood for THE SA-TURDAY EVENING POST.

THE RUNAWAY MATCH.

THE RUNAWAY MATCH.

The church of St. Peter's was open in the morning. A damp old oburch, that you stepped down to as if inte a vanit. The clergyman was in the vestry; the clerk digeted about the pews. Geoffry Clanwaring, in bridegroom's attire, stood looking anxiously from the door.

A panting, breathless girl came in. A most lovely, discipled, timid, shrinking girl, who took off her red gipsy clock as she entered, which had served partially to cover her. Her wedding dress was of white springed indis muslin—it had been a present to her years ago from her godmother—and a straw hat trimmed with a wreath of pale blush roses.

blush roses.

"God bloss you, my darling!" cried Geoffry, seizing upon her. "It is seven minutes past nine, and I was all upon thorns."

Geoffry, seizing upon her. "It is seven minutes past nine, and I was all upon thorns."

"I was so afraid," she whispered. "I did not dare come out of my room for fear of any one's meeting me on the stairs."

"I shall want you to stand father-inchurch to this young lady," said Geoffry to the clerk, alipping a very substantial fee into that functionary's hand.

"At your pleasure, sir."

The clergyman came out in his surplice, and took his place. The clerk directed them where to kneel; standing himself at Maria's elbow. There was no bridesmaid; the clerk was to be "father-in-church" and give the bride away. It has been remarked that such weddings, unattended, were tolerably common them: and the clergyman made no fuss about this one. He saw that the license was in order, asked a question or two, and proceeded with his work.

Rarely had a handsomer couple kuelt before the aitar, never one more a stractive. He, tall and strong, with his fair Saxon beauty, his kindly blue eyes, his golden hair; si e in her gentle, shrinking, blushing loveliness. The clergyman pronounced them man and wife, and gave the bridegroom, at his own request, a certificats.

hair; sie in her gentle, shrinking, blushing loveliness. The clergyman pronounced them man and wife, and gave the bridegroom, at his own request, a certificate.

The weather had culminated into a downfall of rain when they got out again. It had been a dull, gray, threatening morning, and now the rain had commenced. Not very hard, as yet. Maria took her white India mushin up under her cloak, and tripped along on Geoffry's arm. Thanks to the umbrellawhich he had had the precaution to bring from home—and the rainy streets, they got into Mr. Arde's without observation.

In consequence of Mrs. Agde's delicate state, and perhaps also of the reactions of the baby, breakfast there had recently been taken very late. The tea was only being made; and Maria's escapade had not been discovered: it was supposed she had net yet come out of her chamber. Geoffry went in first, in his light overcost.

"Why, Geoffry!" exclaimed George Arde with intense aurprise. "You are in town early!"

Geoffry threw his coat back, and they saw his costume—a gala one. Onite at the first early!"

Geoffry threw his coat back, and they saw his costume—a gala one. Quite at the first moment, no suspicion as to the saky, was aroused. George Arde, as he stared, thought there might be some grand breakfast in the town, that Mr. Clanwaning had come in for. " is anything going on in Worcester today, Geoffry?"
"Not that I know of. I have been getting married."

"Not that I know of. I have been get-ting married."
He turned to the door, and brought Maria in, scarlet clock and all. Mr. Arde looked from one to the other; his wife sunk into a chair, bewildered.

"Oh, Maria!" she gasped.
Maria flew to her, and hid her face on her bosom in a passion of hystarical tears. They could not scothe her: emotion, suppressed hitherto, had its way now.

"Oh, Mary! forgive me!" came the sob-bing ery.

on, many: norgive me!" came the sob-bing cry.
Geoffry tenderly took off the hat and cloak, and stroked the hand with its new wedding ring foudly within his own. Mrs. Arde was pule as death.

A SO SO SO

"OH, MABY, FORGIVE ME?"

"You—are—surely—not really married!"
she exclaimed.
"Here's the certificate," said Geoffry, handing is to Mr. Arde. "It's all in form.
We were married at your parish church—
18t. Peter's."
"Well, you are a clever fellow!" cried
Mr. Arde, half admiringly, half angrily.
"And my father and mother!—oh, what a blow it will be to them!" bewailed Mrs.
Arde, weeping with Maris.
"I hope not," answered Geoffry. "They both like me."
"Who is so break it to them?"

Arde, weeping with Maris.

"I hope not," answered Geoffry. "They both like me."

"Who is to break it to them?"

"I; of course. I shall go over there to-day or to-morrow for the purpose. You won't refuse to give us some breakfast, will you, Arde?"

Mr. Arde, getting a listle over his annoy-ance—for he had felt at first both dismayed and angry—told his that se much breakfast was at their service as they liked to eat. Just as he had been neuter in the matter, hitherto, so he resolved, after taking a minute's inward counsel with himself, to remain. The marriage had certainly been no fault of his: none could be more surprised at it than he was; and therefore no blame could attach to him. He did not soe why he should either espouse their cause, or turn against them for it: and he determined to do neither.

"It is your own concern entirely, Geoffry; I shall not make it mine. I am sorry that you have taken this step—and there's sure to be a row over it: but I don't see that I am called upon to resent it. And so—here's good luck to you both."

"Thank you heartily," replied Geoffry: while Maria sobbed in silence.

"But, do not think I approve of what you have done—don't run away with that sotion to tell your friends," resumed Mr. Arde.

"What are your plans?"

"Plans?" returned Geoffry.

"Ay. Where are you going to take Maria? Up to the moon?"

"Up to Malvern. I have engaged lodgings there for the present."

"Oh, I thought you might be going to take her to Beechhurst Dene," cried Mr. Arde rather satirically.

"I must wait for that."

But before sitting down to breakfast, Maria escaped te her chamber, unseen by either of the servants; there to remove the tell-tale attire and assume her ordinary dress.

Surprises that day seemed to be the lot of Mr. and Mr. Arde. The morning was wear-tell-tale attire and assume her ordinary dress.

Surprises that day seemed to be the lot of Mr. and Mr. Arde. The morning was wearing on, getting near the time that Geoffry intended to take his bride away—diving her in his open gig to avert any suspicion that a close carriage might have endangered—when Squire Arde called. The same little, stooping old man that you have already seen; in the same pepper and salt suit with the sliver buckles at his knees and shoes; and the same fluffy great coat falling off his narrow shoulders. He had never honored them with a call yet; hence the surprise. Mrs. Arde blushed as she rose timidly to receive him.

Mrs. Arde blushed as she rose timidly to receive him.

Squire Arde's visit this morning was not directed by any thought of friendship or courtesy; he had but come to inquire after the character of a man who had been employed upon George Arde's hopgrounds.

"I don't knew much of him, sir," was George's answer to the application. "He is steady enough, I think. Jonathan Drew could tell you more about him than I can."

"Ab, I daresay," was the old man's remark. "But Drew might not speak the truth, you know. "He did not speak truth for Tcm Barber's widow."

"How do you mean, sir?"

"In the matter of that lost paper. Drew

"You think my father did wrong, I see, sir."

"Nay, I judge nobody, young man. But there's some plain words in an old Book that have run through my head, off and on, since the day I saw 'em demolishing her place. 'Remove not the old land-mark, and enter not into the field of the fatherless." Bir Dene den's read his Bible, maybe. "Oh, but he does—sometimes," said Geoffry.

"Ah, then he forgot 'em, maybe. Anyway, the old homestead's gone, and Hester Barber's gone; and the cuttings's broad and smooth, and a fine name you've given to it—Dere Hollow."

"We did not give it: I don't know who did give it, sir."

"And it don't matter who," rejoined the squire.

did give it, sir."

"And it don't matter who," rejoined the equire.

At that moment a young servant maid came in with the baby. When she saw there was a stranger present, she would have retreated; but Mrs. Arde took the child from her. A very pretty, lively little baby in a clean white frock, who sat up and looked with independence on the company. The child stracted Sigure Arde's attention, and he went up and patted its cheek.

"You don't look very peart, my dear," he added, in a kind, fatherly tone, as Mrs. Arde received the child, and he chucked her under the chin. "You should try and get your wife's roses back, George Arde. Good-day to ye all."

They watched him down the path in the rain, the little shrucken figure, riding-whip in hapd, George Arde attending him to open the gate.

His had been a sad history. In the bloom of his early manhood, when life looked fair before him, he had married a young lady to whom he was much attached. She gave birth to a child—a girl—and soon afterwards symptoms of insanity developed themselves. Ever since then until her death, which only occurred three years ago, she had been the raving ismaste of a lunatic asylum. The little girl lived to be ten years old: and her death nearly broke her father's heart. Since roply—and Geoffry could but note with what strangely calm sadners he was speaking. "Your father's will be of more moment than mine; and that I fear you will never get. I cannot forgive Maria."

"Oh but she was not to blame; it was not her fault," ardently burst forth Geoffry. "She only yielded to me after months of persuasion."

"There lies her fault—that she did yield," spoke the farmer gravely. "I had thought that I could place implicit trust in my daughthat I could place implicit trust in my daughters."

"She will be your dutiful daughter still, Mr. Owen, and her mother's too, although abe is my wife. I'll bring her over to see you next week."

"Do you fancy you were justified in taking this extreme step, sir?"

"Not entirely," candidly avowed Geoffry; but yes in a very great degree. The only one to whom I cannot plead justification is my own father. To you and Mrs. Owen I may, and do, plead it. Had you not told me, sir, that you liked me for myself; that you would, had circumstances only been favorable, have willingly given me Maris?"

Robert O won drew in his refined and beauful lips. It was true, so far.

"But the circumstances were not favorable, Mr. Clauwaring. You know perfectly well that I aliuded to your father. Only in the event of his being willing, should I have been."

the event of his being willing, should I have been."

"You see I was obliged to marry her as I have done," confessed Geoffer. "Had I asked my father's consent, he would have forbidden it altogether—and in the teeth of an absolute refusal I should not have liked to disobey him. As it is, nobody forbade it; and I have but taken my own way."

"I should call that three parts sophistry, it."

"And one part good wholesome honesty," returned Geoffry, his earnest eyes full of smoore meaning. "Believe me, Mr. Owen, it will all come right. Sir Dene will be angry at first; little doubt of it; but he'll not retain anger long. I wrote to him la. $ ally has to suffer from neglect in the long run."

"Mine never shall," emphatically spoke Gooffry, his whole face burning-red with resentments at the implied sugaetion. "If I know anything of myself, Mr. Owen, of my nature, my principles, my love, Maria will be as dear to me and as honored by me in the far-off years to come, as she is an this, the morrow of my wedding day."

In the far-off years to some! Could poor Gooffry—could fil-fated Robert Owen—but have foreseen a shadow of the events that were destined to happen long hefore those far-off years should dawn! Astrologers have assumed to see into the future; but it is not one of the least meroise of God that all such sight is hidden from our view.

CHAPTER VI. BREASTING THE STORM.

Clattering up through the gates of Beechhurst Dene in a noisy post-chaise and peir late at night, went hir Dene Clauwaring and his eldest som. Geoffry's "goed long letter" was not received se soon by two or three days as it might have been, in comequence of hir Dene's temporary absence from Lendon. It had now brought him down in a fury, and Mr. Clauwaring accompanied him to take par's in the storm. He was a little, dark man, this eldest son and heir; proud, honorable, haughtily self-conscieus of his degree and position. As little like his father and Geoffry in person as he could well be; resembling, in fact, his dead mother. Bitterly wrathful, was the, against Geoffry for the (as he called it) degrading marriage; he asid less than hir Dene, but his anger was inwardly greater and would be more lasting. Mr. Clauwaring intended to mate with one of high degree, himself; the youngest brother, in India, had married a title; how could they brook the diagrace on the family inflicted by Geoffry? Mr. Clauwaring's private opinion was that he deserved hanging. As a matter of course he must be discarded forever; blotted out of the Clauwaring archives.

The housekeeper came forward in dismay as the chaire stopped; she had received no intimation of Sir Dene's return, and had been the return for the night. He waved

The housekeeper eams forward in dismay as the chaise stopped; she had received no intimation of Sir Dene's return, and had been about to retire for the night. He waved her off; said they did not want much supper; anything would do; but ordered a fre to be lighted instantly in his parier, and Gander seat to him.

Gander was in bed. A faithful serving man some forty years old, who had spent the last half of them with his master in India, and was now butler. Gander had a frightful toothacke—which he was always having—and had gone to bed at nine on the atrength of it. He was a red-faced man with obstinate dark hair that never could be persuaded by the brush to lic on his head, but stood up in straight pieces like porceipines' quills, as if he were in a chronic state of fright! The popular phrase—his hair stood on end—might have been made for Gander.

"Now then, Gander," began Bir Dene as soon as he appeared, "what is the truth of this infamous business?"

Gander knew what was meant, and wished himself miles away; he was nearly as simple as hie name. The offender, Mr. Geoffry, was a great favorite of his.

"Can't you speak?" cried Sir Dene.

"Well, Sir Dene—I—I suppose you have heard of it," stammared Gander.

"Is he really married?"

"On yes, sir, I believe so."

"And to one of those girls of Owen's!"

"Yes, sir, it's she. The only one left of tem. Equire Arde's nephew married the other."

"Squire Arde's nephew?" Gander had thrown in that in his good nature: a re-other."

"Squire Arde's nephew?" Gander had thrown in that in his good nature; a reminder that his young master was not the first gentleman by birth who had gone to Parmer Owen's for a wife.
"Has be been here since?" thundered Sir Dane.

Dens.
"Mr. Geoffry ?-no, sir. We hear he is staying at Malvern."
John the heir turned round: he was holding his boots, first one then the other, to the faggots in the grate, now blasing up.

2000

"Is it known yet in the neighborhood, Gender?"

"Lawk, Mr. Clanwaring, sir! Known! Way, it's the whole talk of the place—and has been since the day after the wedding, when Mr. Geoffry come over to hig furgiveness of Farmer Owen. 1"

"Fragiveness of Aim." interjected Mr. Clanwaring with curifug lips.
Gender date cled the panies. "I hag your parden, Mr. Clanwaring," he recumed with depression. "If's each he did do it. Farmer Owen is as grieved shout it as anybody size can be. He sold figurier Ards that it was just a blow to him."

"Does he consider Mr. Geoffry Clanwaring beneath his daughter?" questioned the heir in accuriful mockery.

"It is because he known it will put Mr. Geoffry wrong with Sir Dene—that's why he feels it as a blow," cried honest Gander.
"Cense this, John," stormed the barones, bringing down his hand on the table by which he stood. "What I want to know is, how he got acquainted with the girl. They would not be married off-hand without some acquaintanoeship. Somebody must have known that there were meetings between them."

known that there were meetings between them."

"As to that, Geoffry was always out and about like a bailiff," spoke Mr. Cianwaring, while Gander was wisely silent.

"He had his work to do, John. Overlooking, and that."

"Yes, sir. I imagine, though, that Harebell Farm was better looked after than all the rest of the land put together."

"Harebell Farm is not in my occupation; he had no business there at all," growled Bir Dene. And his son gave a stamp to the burning weed with his right boot.

"The young lady has not been at home these five weeks peat, Bir Dene—leastways, it's said so," added cautious Gander, not deaming it expedient to know too much. "The tale runs that she has been staying at Worcester with her sister, Mrs. Arde."

A sudden flash of enlightenment, like an illumination, darted through Bir Dene's brais. He turned on his heel.

"Then that explains his vicits to Worcester! John, I thought he had gone Worcester. He was always there."

"And no one could open their lips to tell Beechburst Dene of it!" said John bitterly. "Did you know nothing of it, Gander?"

"Not a word, Mr. Clanwaring. Of course, sir, I know it was as Bir Dene says—that Mr. Geoffry was often going to Worcester: but is never came into my head to wonder why he went."

why he went."

Bir Dene was bitting his hot lips. "Let's see-which day was it that he made this shameful marriage, Gander?"

"Twas last Thursday, sir—a week ago to-morrow. But eir, put is shat I had suspected the truth—what end would it have served? I could not have stopped Mr. Geoffry from getting married—or attempted to stop him. He is my master, sir."

"You are a fool, Gander," growled Sir Dene.

Dene.
To what use the discussion? Of what avail to dispute as to what might have been? It could not undo the fact of the marriage, or part Geoffry Clauwaring from the young girl be had made his wife.

giil he had made his wife.

On the following day, Thursday, Geoffry drove his wife over from Malvern to Harebell Faim. And there, happening to meet one of his father's servants, he learnt the fact that Sir Dene had come thundering home in a storm of passion. Leaving Maria with her mother, he want at once to Beecharat Dene.

hurst Dene.

There was a distressing and turbulent scene. Gee, firy found more enemies than he had bargained for. Not only were his father and brother there: but his mother's sister, Muss Clewer, a precise maideen lady of more than middle ago, had also arrived. The news of her favorite nephew's escapade had reached her at home in Gloucestershire, and she posted over in a chaise and four in direconsternation.

Going in by the back way, Geoffry met Gander in the passage. The butler started back when he saw who it was; and took the opportunity to whisper a word of warning.

"They be all in the library, Mr. Geoffry," he said, "making a frightful outery against you. The master, and Mr. Clatwaring, and Miss Aun Clewer—she's come over, sir. I've just carried in a pitcher o' water to keep her out of a fit of the 'steries."

"Great cry and little wool, Gander," said Geoffry, with light good humor. But nevertheless he shrauk from the task before him. He would not so much have minded Sir Dene alone; but there was the wrath of his haughty brother in addition to be encountered; not to speak of his aunt's hysterics.

The room called the library was a charming one. Not large, with a bay window opening on the sile of the house opposite to that of the Harebell Lane entrance. It looked on the green park; on its beautiful old trees scattered here and there; on the herd of tame deer. It had been the favorite sitting-room of the late Lindy Clanwaring, and was lightly and tastily furnished, the carpet bright with roses, the chairs and curtains of pale green brocade.

Geoffry opened the door quietly, and they did not see him. Sir Dune was paoing the filority of the late waring stood with his face to the window; Miss Clewer (a very thin lady with a flaxen "front") cat on a sofa, her bonnet and shawl on, just as ahe had got out of the poet-chaise; her eyes dropping tears.

"Sir Done! Father!"

They saw him then; and a fine commotion set in. Whan Gander had called a frightful outory became more frightful. Sir Dene raved. Ann Clewerasobbed; John Clanwaring stard contemptuously in his brother's face, his thin lips compressed, his arms folded. Geoffry stood his ground before them, hoping for a hearing; upright, noble, his fair Saxon face quite remarkable in its beauty. He sis ove to make the best defined he could; hat it was not a mousent calculated to enhance an offender's courage. Sir Dene interrupted him at every second word, utterly refusin

A CONTRACTOR

"Is it known yet in the neighborhood, ander?" Lawk, Mr. Clauwaring, sir! Known!
"Lawk, Mr. Clauwaring, sir! Known!
Toggiven! Sir Dene flung away the hand hy, it's the whole talk of the place—and as been since the day after the wedding, singpering; and ordered him out of the Forgiven | Sir Desse tung away the manny with a pessionete force that sent ideoffry staggering; and outered him out of the house.

"Ge," he thundered, his arm stratohold out to indicate the door. "Ges your living in the best way you can. I east you off from this hour."

And Geoffry went. Finding that the leager he stayed the werse it got, he went. At the angle of the passage stood Gander, with a face as red as a ourkey's comb.

"It has been a west as he had as ball-halting, hand's it, Mr. Geoffry?" he whispered.

"There has been as much noise, Gander."

"Ay. But look here, sir—don's you be down-hearted. Bir Dene's temper's up—and mobody knows better than me the lot of swearing it takes to cool it down again. One has to swear, living in India. Just let Mr. Clanwaring get away from the place—he is the hottest against you, sir, and it edges on Bir Dene. When he's safe off and the house is clear, you come again, Mr. Geoffry, and try then. I can tell you one thing, air—your father likes you better than he dees him."

Geoffry nodded. He knew all this just as well as Gander. While he was giving circe-

Aim."
Geoffry nodded. He knew all this just as well as Gander. While he was giving directions for his clothes to be sent to him, the library door opened, and Mr. Clanwaring well as Gander. While he was giving outer tions for his clothes to be sent to him, the library door opened, and Mr. Clanwaring came out.

"You will shake hands with me before I go, wont you, John?" he asked, when he had the say to Gander—and the tone was a somewhat pitcous one. But Mr. John Clanwaring rejected the held-out hand quite as unmistakably though less demonstratively than Bir Dene had done; and pas-ed on, leaving a few cold and catting words behind him.

Bo Geoffry went out of his father's house by the nearest and least ceremocious way. As he crossed Harebell Lane, he saw Robert Owen leaning on his gate.

"Well, how have you sped?" were the words that greeted him.

"Badly to-day," was the young man's candid answer. "It was the expected I should, this first time. Things will come all right later, Mr. Owen—at least with my father. I am sure of it."

"Is Bir Deas very much incensed?" questioned Mr. Owen.

"Yes. Old Aunt Ann has come posting over—to make matters worse; and my brother is at home, which is worse still. Between them all, I had not fair play. No play at all, in fact. It will be different—when I can get to see my father alone."

"And meanwhile, what are you to do for ways and means, Mr. Clanwaring?"

Geoffry smiled. "That need not concern me, yet, sir; I am not reduced to my last ten-pound note. Never having had ill outlets for my money, as some young fellows have, I saved it."

Robert Owen shook his head. "The time may come when you will rue the day of your foolish marriage with Maris."

"It never will," acid Geoffry with emphasis. "She is a great deal too precious to me for that to come to pass."

Mr. Owen allhed. Others had thought the amme and lived to find themselves butterly

"Brack must be uncommonly bold if it is anything beyond smuggling. Do you think he'd venture on it?"

"There never was a safer place for it than the Trailing indian has been," observed Mr. Owen. "Moses Black occupied this farm, and of course was in his brother's interest; Mr. Honeythorn kept but three or four servants at the Dene in his old age—and they mostly women. Why, a gang of amugglers, or what not, might have gone up this lane nightly, and not been met or seen once in a twilvemonth! And you know how lonely the field way is across to Worcester!"

Geoffey Clanwaring took out his watch. "What time do you cine, Mr. Owen?"

"I expect dinner's ready now, sir."

"Then I'll go up to the Trailing Indian after dinner, before we start for home. Mr. Randy Black must get a hint from me, to mind his manners."

"I should have given him a hint myself long ago, only that I possessed no right to interfere," said Rubert Owen. "You may tell him so if you like, Mr. Clanwaring."

When dinner was ever (served in the best youn, and in the best style that Harsbell Farm could venture on—for this was the first time it had had the honor of entertaining for Dene's son! Geoffry started for the Trailing Indian. He took the short out over the fields—not much above five minutes' walk that way—and lesped the little stile at the end of the Farm's grounds, which brought him out opposite the ins. Black was standing at his door, and watched the exit. He tonched his has to his landlord's con.

He vaulted over the stile at a run, leaving Black looking as dark as his name. Geach came sauntering forth from the inn door, behind which he had been peeping all the while.

"What's up, Randy? You look fit to eat your grandmother."
"If this is not the work of that confounded rat, call me false forever!" oried Black, stamping with passion.
"What work? What rat?" asked Geach.
"Robert Owen."

CHAPTER III.

Has sight was excellent sull, except for close prict; it was not that; but there seemed to be some large, dark object, of indistinct form, drawn right across the yard. And when at length he slowly made out that, and other things, Jonathan Drew's head seemed

"If want to speak to you, Black. Will you walk about with me in the lane for a minute or two?" which has before the hame, begoed chance of caree-droppers, Geoffry Clearurating and the hint thet he had come to give. He did not access Bleck outright of mortising and the hint thet he had come to give. He did not access Bleck outright of mortising the steek hint thet he had come to give the text of milling ledian would beer the light of day. And he emphatically recommended anamolisg—or he would hear more of it from fif Dene.

"Bobert Owen has been putting you up to say this!" was Black's first comment, spoken with suppressed farceness.

"No one has put me to may it—I come of my own accord. Though I may tell you, Black that Mr. Owen has just into a more of the year of the Trailing Indian that I have. He sees queer people steading up here often amongh at night."

A change passed over Black's evil face. It settled into a sneer.

"Owen has taken a spite against me, Mr. Geoffry Clanwaring. I've knowed it long. My busief is, he wants to get me out of the Trailing Indian that be may have the place himself; that's why he isvents these lies."

"Don't be absurd, mu, "rebuked Geoffry." My warning in a friendly one. If needed, you will do wisely to act upon it; If unneeded, why, there's no harm done."

"It's a shame that people should try to take away my character behind my back!"

"As to smaggling, the popular bellef it that the whole consists of the Allegery in carlesing remarked Geoffry." In a shame that people should try to take away my character behind my back!"

"As to smaggling, the popular bellef it that the whole consist on the Trailing Indian but what has been through his Majesty' carries and the word conditions of the swar was one of the condition of the part to the condition of the part to the left, it thus reversed the short distance of the headed, dropping his voice, "to harhor steel and the through the say the said, all over the world, London and ternoon."

"It's a shame that people should try to take away my ch

A MODEST LETTER. We recently received the following letter from as Academy in a seighboring state. We quote it as it is written—omitting, in mercy to the writer, his address:—

MAY THS. 1871.

May come when you will rust the day of your foolsh marriage with Marla.

"It assers will, "add Geoffry with emphasing the state of the season of the state of the state of the season o all Government communications should in future be written with the vegetable juice. The ink is of a reddish color when freshly written, becoming perfectly black after a few hours, and it has the recommendation of not corroding steel pens so readily as ordia ury ink.

of m, drawn right across the yard. And when at length he slowly made out that, and other things, Jonathan Drew's head seemed to turn the wrong way upwards, and his life-blood to cardie witain him.

If was a hearse. A black hearse with four plumes at its corners. The end of it was a hearse. A black hearse with four plumes at its corners. The end of it was a carpenter, assisted issued; and there seemed to be some figures moving. Four or five men; and they were bringing something out of the house; something that the babiff at length made out to be a coffic.

"Wuc can have died there?" settly ejaculated Drew in his bewilderment. "When the last words, that Black's wife had been very ill recently; Mr. Priar had been attending on her. Low fever, or something of that. "It must be ter that's in the coffic. Why to like the construction of the houses, but this witching hour?"

But, as reason gradually replaced the first confused surprise, Drew remembered that the pould not be taking out Mrs. Black at this witching hour?"

But, as reason gradually replaced the first confused surprise, Drew remembered that the pould not be taking out Mrs. Black and they could not be baried, unless they were going to do it without "bell, book, and the pould not be baried, unless they were going to do it without "bell, book, and the total make they could not be baried, unless they were going to do it without "bell, book, and the curry is a lot of bandles. A week after he had just recovered sufficiently to tell us the above as a warning.

A hand-to-hand affair—Marriage.

ITEMS.

ggr " Mr. Jones, what makes the Canary sleep on one leg?" "I don't think anybody makes him, my dear; I think he does it of his own searcd."

makes him, my dear; I think be does it of his own accord."

IN ORLY RIGHT SHE SHOULD.—Revered Gentleman.—"You don't counct church re close as you used to, Mr. Chope." Mr. Chope." Mr. I know I don't, but I cughter, I'm sure, 'ensee you buye a deal o' meat of as!"

IN MATURE COULDN'T APPOINT.—A young gestleman who had just married a little beauty says she would have been taller, but she is made of each presions materials that nature couldn't afford it.

IN I is said that the New Jarmy watering-places are rapidy filling up with moquitoes, and never before were, they so thoroughly organized and confident of success.

Coes.

ET PLEASANT MEETING-HOUSER.—The poet Bryant says that "the groves were God's first temples." Many romantic years lovers unquestionably find them delightful lovers unquestionably mod them delightfal meeting-houses.

2 Just So.—The reason why editors have their manners potied is because they receive so many evil communications from one correspondent or another.

2 Low collars, and turned over, are the fashion for gentlemen.

A Pretender to the Crown-A chignon.

EF A young man with a plump sweet-heart may call her lump-sugar.

EF KREP OUT OF ANOTHER'S POWER.

By no means put yourself in another per-son's power. If you put your thumb be-tween two grinders, they are very apt to bits.

tween two grinders, they are very apt to bits.

(3) A musical friend thinks that the first piece of music performed by Adam must have been "Warblings at Eva."

(2) A Chicage paper cays of a contemporary that "it has doubled its circulation. Another man takes a copy now."

(3) A new color, called blue-green or peacock-green, is very fashlonable for beanets and costumes this season.

(3) With all the boasted superiority of English railway management, more people were killed there in the last three mostts by railroad accidents than were killed in the United States from similar causes during the whole of the year 1870.

(3) "Atom" visited the French fair in Boston, and thus reports his experience:

whole of the year 1870.

13 "Atom" visited the French fair is Boston, and thus reports his experience: Young Lady—Bir, wouldn't you like to buy some tickets in a panch-bowl? Atom—Ne, thank you; I never driak. Young Lady (lasinuatingly)—Well, wouldn't you like to buy some cigars then? Atom (with a grave face)—No, thank you, I never smoke. Young Lady (losing patience)—Well, i'd offer you some scap if I thought you ever washed.

25 Welcome lines to ladies—Macculines.

27 Plant sunflowers, if there is any place about your bouse where water is thrown est and likely to become malarious. This plant has the power of absorbing malaria and purifying the atmosphere.

27 The different states are moving in the matter of compelling railroad corporations to put down their charges for travel to more reasonable rates.

28 Rhode Islanders visiting the Capitel have been disguested to find that the ignorast atone-sutter who carved the name on the bottom of the statue of Gen. Greene, in the old Hall of Representatives, has spelled in without the final B. On being asked why he omitted this letter, he reptied that Greene, and he didn's see the use of more than two vowels in that word. Besides, said he, Greene-spells nothing but Greeny, and the man's name was Green.

28 On some of the new palace stock-car lines, it is said that a man goes along to fan the hogs.

On some of the new patters stock-car lines, it is said that a man goes along to fan the hogs.

(37 A clergyman in Connecticut boasis the title of Rsv. Hesokiah Piddle, D. D.

(37 "Well, my dear," said our good pastor at Sunday-school, to a tow-headed urchin, "I am glad to hear you are gesting to be a better boy." "Why, sir," said little Joe, looking up with grave earnestness, "goeh I sin't been sick."

(38 For Gentlemen.—It is said that the spring style for gentlemen when passing a lady on the street is to raise the hat with the left hand. It is important to remember that while performing this ceremony the thumb and little finger are to be placed under the rim, and that the bow must be a little to the left side, and not quite so low as formerly. Gentlemen whe find it hard to fall into new fashions gracefully, should practice at home before a glass.

(37 "Long engagements," writes a young lay, "are going out of fashion, young men being at last convinced of the suppdity of making matrimonial proposals before they are in a position to fulfili their promise at once." It is base flattery to call a man an idian who, in a crowd, will deliberasely carry are in a position to talk the product of the control of the contro Corner" 18.

To Longer Longer.—The young man who was "lonely since his mother died is all right bow. His father married a widow with five grown daughters, and they give a party every night.

Beneca tells us that "not to return one good office for another is simply inhumen, but to return evil for good is disbolical." There are too many even of this sort, who, the more they ewe, the more they hate. There is nothing more dangerous than to obligs such persons; for when they are conscious of not paying the debt, they wish the creditor out of the way.

The 'an old Brooklyn gentleman started to go to Albany, a short time size, and almost as soon as on board the train asked the conductor if the next station was Pough keepsic, repeating his quee'ion at each succeeding stopping place until the irate official cartly said he would tell him when they got there, and upon arriving there excisined: "This is Poushkeepsie. Hurry up and got there, and upon arriving there exclaimed:

"This is Poughkeepsie. Hurry up and got off. We are behind time." "Ou, thank you," deliberately drawled the quandam questioner, "but I am going througe. My daughter cautioned me to take a pill at Poughkeepsie. That's all."

-DO-2003

give fall not classed fitte us.

(A) (3) (B) (B) er er er er er

-

not unwell, I hope, you note a shudder, "no.
"No," she answered with a shudder, "no.
I don't think I am! How cold it seems!
Have you been here long?"
"I have only just come in: the 'trap' broke down half-way, end made me late.
Are you not daneing!"
"As you please." She was like a child before him now.
He led her away, and they joined the led her away, and they joined the led her away, and they joined the led her away, and they poined the led her away.

And the porter's hand made a quick monate to the late.

And the porter's hand made a quick monate to the late.

"No." she answered with a shudder, "no.
"I look all was starting, a gentleman, accompanied by a closely veiled lady, hurried on the platform.
"Look sharp, sir!" cried a porter; "only just in time. Any loggage?"
"None! Put me in a carriage by my-self!"

And the porter's hand made a quick monate and the platform.

"As you please." She was like a child before him now.

He led her away, and they joined the throng in the centre of the room. But Laura was tired, and, after a few turns, saked to sit down, and so they strolled away to find a cooler place. It was a long corridor, with a ming of doors, a shrill whistle, the deep rush of air lifting the heavy orange branches that closed round the open windows—dim with the light of colored lanterns; the sir drowsy with the odor of the orange-trees and splash of a fountain. Through the open and splash of a fountain. Through the open doors floated the distant music and the hum of voices. All else was still and silent.

And so they went! There was a crimson fautouil in the window near them, with great cushions flung invit-ingly upon it, and a thick tracery of orange-leaves in front.

"Shall we sit a little?" he asked; and without waiting her assent, he led her to the

What Charita Griffiths Paid for Rich Company.

SEE COMPANY.

SET PRINT CHAPTERIS.

On I family are described in severe to the control of the

Not many hours afterwards, the "down" stress rattled into the station. One of the first passengers to jump out was Charlie, his cheery face all aglow in its nest of furs and travelling wraps. Ten minutes later he was at the house in Waterloo Terrace. Hardly noticing the puzzled expression on the servant's face, he pushed past her, and flung open the drawing-room door; then, finding it deserted, left it swinging wide, and tried the dining-room, with like success. Then he stamped up-stairs, and they heard his foot-steps across the bed-room, and into the little dressing-room beyond. Then he came back.

thought, that grew and grew till it set a fixed purpose there, strong and steady. Amidst all the ruin of his hopes, with all her memories scattered round him, with all his load of sorrow fresh and full upon him, the purpose grew and gathered, driving back that other cloud, and filling his heart with a holy calm—the calm of an henest heart, of a loyal man.

"I have driven her to this. This is my doing, and I must lead her back!"

He put the things again in their places to tenderly, and smoothed the tumbled ball-id dreas as if she he longed for was still within it, and pressed the pretty jewels to his lips, and then went forth to find her.

"You must keep the fires up," he said in parting, "and have the tea-things laid, Draw the table near the fire; the nights are cold now, and it's bitter travelling in them. And Mary i see the room is tidy—her room, up-stairs. I'm rough, and my hands don't fold as yours do, and the things are tumbled: a she must not find them so. D you hear, and mary." He was thinking of her coming—the coming that never came.

Once again in the train, past the flying balks. No never Barker.

without waiting her assent, he led her to the seat.

An ioy dread crept over her, deadening all assens and will, as she said down, for she house in Waterloo Terrace. Hardy noticing the puzzled expression on the servant time she feared had gome.

"Laura: "he said, that he house in Waterloo Terrace. The house had been the form the large past the trooping laborers, whisting their which and husky, "this cannot go on; to night must choose bet feared—for you! I give late the dining-room, with like success. Then he class and single of the wait. The said class are shell as a shell as the secret distinguished the word of the har, prevails it from the large past the trooping laborers, whisting their whom the sure the dening room, and in the train, past the first past the trooping laborers, whisting their whose better sever all—friends, honor, everything that man holds most dear and aftered—for you! I will independ the server of the word in the word of the server o ggr I should like to know, writes Sophic Sparkle to the New York Mail, why a we-man cannot set about whetever competion she chooses to undertake without having the world step short in its busy routine to open its eyes and mouth and stars at her?

R. R. R.

Cures the worst paiso in from one to twenty minutes. Not one hour after reading this advertisement need any one suffer with pain. Mind weny's Meetedy Bestief is a cure for every pain. It was the first and is the only pain remedy that instantly stops the most excreciating Pulm, allays Indiammeticus, and cures Congestions, whether of the Langs, Stemach, Bowels, or other glands or organs, by one application, in from one to twenty minutes, no matter how violent or excreoisting the pain, the Rheumstie, Bed-ridden, Infrm, Crippled, Narveus, Neuralgia, or prestrated with disease, may suffer. Price 50 cents.

DR. RADWAY'S

PERFECT PURGATIVE PILLS. Perfectly tasteless, elegantiv conted, for the ouro of all disorders of the Stomach, Livez, Bosrols, Edineys, Bladder, Nervous Discases, Hondache, Coustipation, Contivenous, Indigestion, Dyapopota, Ediousiers, Billions Pever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piler, and all Darangements of the Inhernal Viscora. Warranted to effect a Positive Cure.

Price 26 cents per pox. Sold by Draggists.

price 36 cents per pox. Sold by Druggists.

Price 36 cents per pox. Sold by Druggists.

DE. HABWAY, & Office

O IPBEFLUGETS HARM REMOVED S. from all parts of the body in five mission with out injury to the chin, by UPBAR'S DEFILATION FOWNER. Sonk by mail for 42.8 by S. C. UPBAR No 100 couth Eighth street, Philosolphia, Pa. Son by all druggiets. Circulars from may 97-18.

UPHAM'S ASTHMA CURE.

constructed by done of poleon, is fa'es and den-gerous. Within the last treaty-dve years, not less than a corre of virulent poleone have been added to the repository of the medical profession. They are they produce, ultimately, very disastrons effects. It is unwise and unphilosophical to employ, as reme-dies, powerful and insidious drags, which, in subjucaments operates with as much directness and ourtainty upon the causes of disease as HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, a tonic and corrective, with-BTOMACH BITTERS, a toule and corrective, without a single deleterious ingredient in the composition. Arsenic and quinia are given for intermittents; bremide of potassium for servous dissectors of strychnine and prassic sold for general debility; mercury, in various forms, for liver complaint; preparations of chleroform and optum for eleephesaness; and yet these deadly drugs do not compare, as specifies for the diseasee above enumerated, with that wholesome vegetable invigorant and alterative, while they are all so pernicious that it is astive, while they are all so pernicious that is fastive, while they are all so pernicious that is fasbuilting any physician should take the responsibility of prescribing them. Let invalida, for their own sakes, try the Bitters before they resert to the poisons. The relief they will experience from a course of the harmiers specific, will render a resourse to the unsafe preparations referred to, quits unimeccassity.

PITS: PITS: PITS: PITS:

Persons laboring under this distressing maledy will find HANCE'S EPILEPTIC FILLS to be the only remedy ever discovered for CURING EPILEPSY OR FALLING FITS.

Bent by mail, free of postage. Address SETH 8. HANCE, 108 Bultimore street, Baltimore, Md. Price—one box, $5; two, $5; tweive, $27. spin-5m To Cure a Cough, Cold or Sore Throat, use ENOWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES, nov#6-6m 500.000 PEOPLE have used DR. J. MILLING BALBAM—the best family medicine in the world for internal and external compaints. Price 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggiets. J. MilLER & SONS, Proprietors, 212 Broadway, (Knoa's Building) N. Y.

Please send for Circular. Established 1897.

app-3m

FOR NOTH PATCHES, FRECKLES

AND TAN, use PERRY'S MOTH AND PRECKLE LOTION. It is reliable and harmless.

THE MARKETS,
PLOUR—9000 bis Wisconsin family, Ohio and Indians family and City Mills family soid at from 80,809,5,50 tor superfine; 80,309,5 for extra; 80,309,5 tor superfine; 80,309,5 for Northwest extra family; 8707,75 for Indians and Ohio family, and 868,5,00 by boil for family, and 868,5,00 by boil for family famil

10000 C

I prishes send me back my heart, Since I cannot have thine; For if from yours you will not part, Why, then, should'st thou have mine?

Yet now I think on't, let it lie, Yet now I think on a, see a see.

To find it were in vain;

For thou'st a thief in cither eye

Would steel it back again.

Why should two hearts in one breast lie. And yet not lodge together?
Oh, love! where is thy sympathy,
if thus our breasts thou sever?

But love is such a mystery, I cannot find it out; For when I think I'm best resolv'd, I then am most in doubt.

Then farewell care, and farewell woe, I will no longer pine; For I'll believe I have ber heart As much as she has mine.

ON SILVER WINGS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "Juyes Dormer's Story."

CHAPTER I.

Two nooms at the top of an old-fashioned country bosse, that stood on the slope of a bill jacing due west, so that the firrce burning and came pouring is all through the summer afternoous, fading carpets and curtains, and making the somewhat tarnished girding of the picture frames look more tarnished than ever, in the brilliant, uncompromising light. There was no help for it, unless the Venetian blinds were drawn dowe, or the outer shutters closed, and the house darkened, as though there had been a death in it. Therefore, sometimes the house was closed up in the manner desaribed, and sometimes every blind was drawn up as high as it would go, every shutter thrown back, and the dazzling sunshine flooded the rooms in undisturbed brightness.

Just as it suited the humor of the master of the house. Sunshine or cloud, heat or I WO ROOMS AT THE TOP OF THE HOUSE.

of the house. Sunshine or cloud, heat or cold, produced no regulating effect. He was his own barometer. As his will willed it, so was the weather to him, entirely independent of atmospheric influences.

A man of middle height, verging on thirty

A man of middle height, verging on thirty years of age—pale, restless, with dark eyes, that might have had much in them to read if people could only have fathomed them, or if their possessor had been of sufficiently stable mood to retain one expression long enough for any one to comprehend it. But the eyes shone out with such waried meaning in the space of a few seconds, that people came to the conclusion that nothing could be gathered from them, and that Jasper Beaton was a man of too changeable a character te put much faith in.

Perhaps they were right. He was passionate, and full of whims, which made him appear wavering; yet he had no lack of determination—only, unfortunately, it was overruled by caprice.

"Why has D the two worst rooms in the house?" asked Jasper Seaton of his mother.

Mer. Seaton was placidly sitting in the full blaze of the sun, which was gradually turning the faded roses on the carpet to a sick-lier autannal hue, which contrasted un-ing the faded roses on the carpet to a rick-lier autumnal hue, which contrasted un-favorably with their deep crimon counter-favorably with their deep crimson counterparts in the more shaded and secluded portions of the room.

Mrs. Seaton did not mind the sun; neither did she mind the gloom when the house was darkened; she was pleased with what pleased her son, and everything that did not please him was in her eyes rank heresy. Therefore his question startled her a little.

"I wrote to say that she was to have her choice of rooms," he continued.

"Of course you did, Jasper; and I showed the letter to Di—and Di flew over the house, in and out of every room, and came down out of breath to tell me that she would have the two at the top of the house, in the north wing, that had been shut up so long. I don't know why, unless it was that she had found a piece of tapestry on one of the walls."

"Anne wished her to have the rooms she used to have," said Jasper, half in solitoquy.

"You did not say so, Jasper, or perhaps Di would have taken them. She was very fond of Anne when she was staying here. Anne was the only one who had any influence over her. She's terribly willful."

"Shall I tell her that Anne wished her to

"Phaw!"
"Shall I tell her that Aune wished her to have her rooms? I dare say she would move down if she knew it."
"No," said Jasper; "no--don't say anything about it. She's chosen for herself; let her keep to her choice. But what can have induced her to ge up there!"
"She says it is so quiet."
"Quiet! What does Di care about quietness?"

ness ?"

"It's come upon her since her engagement; and perhaps Anne's death has had something to do with it."

And Mrs. Scaton began to sob gently at the remembrance of her lost daughter.

But Jasper only heard the first part of her speech.

"Bagagement !" be repeated. "Engaged since I went away! There's not been time. And who on earth is there for her to get angaged to here?"

"Did not Di write to you?"
"Not about that. Who is it? Where did the most lim?"
Mrs. Senton had been contemplating bear

"Not about their. Who is it? Where dis she meet him?"

Mr. Senton had been contemplating her son stampingly, and new that he was more than bendity assessed. She began to be doubtful of the part she had taken in constanating the heaty engagement; so began to defend herself before she was attacked. I thought yes would be delighted, Jappe. It will be such a relief to get Dians off our hands, and comfortably settled in Mic; and he's a young man of good family and ex—that is, tolerable prospects; and I ms sure that Dians is already beginning to be quite a different orealure; and poor Anne, she would be sure to approve—such a very assished young man. He—"

"Who is it?" asked Jasper Seaton, impatiently.

"Who is 16?" asked Jasper Seaton, impatiently.
"I don't think you have heard his name. He came to read with the rector, the day after you went off to poor Anne. Let me eee—that is about two months ago. He'e going into the church. His uncle, or his godinther, or it may be his granofather, I cannot be sure," said Mrs. Seaton—
"Never mind," interrupted her son, "what is his name?"
"Carteret—John Carteret. His father is a Chancery barrister. Rather a large family;

"Carteret—John Carteret. His father is a Chancery barrister. Rather a large family; and this is the third son. His mother is a relation of Lady Pechford of Driffington. You remember her, don't your I think Mr. Carteret's second name is Pechford. Yes, it is—John Pechford Carteret. Rev. John Pechford Carteret it will be. It is better than we might have expected for a girl without a penny, like Di."

Jasper Seaton started slightly, then he repeated.—

pealed—
"John Pechford Carteret—going into the Church! What nonsense. Quite unsuitable for a girl like Di. Is he going to teach her theology?" And his lip curied contempt-

"I am sure it is a great blessing," mur-mured Mrs. Seaton. "Other people's children are never like one's own. One never knows what to do with them. How Robert knows what to do with them. How Robert Ellis could think of leaving you guardian to sie child I cannot imagine. Why couldn't he have thrown her upon his own family?"

Jasper Seaton answered nothing. He strode up and down the room in the glaring sunlight, and twenty varied expressions flitted over his reatless countenance.

Mrs. Seaton did not puzzle herself with attempting to analyze them; her son was beyond her comprehension, and she was content he should be. He was her only son—her only child, now that Anne was dead. He had been more to her even than her daughter; for her daughter had married early, and had lived all her married life in France, and had died there within the last daughter; for her daughter had married early, and had lived all her married lite in France, and had died there wishin the last two months, after a short widowhood spent among her husband's relatives.

"You were much too young to be made a guardian. Let me see; it's twelve years since DI came to us—going on for thirteen. It was abaurd. But I dare eay Robert Ellis thought you would marry her in the end; and, perhaps you might have done, if this had not fortunately happened to prevent it. Di is getting quite a woman now; and there's no saying what unlikely things may happen when people are thrown together.

Jasper Seaton might or might not have heard his mother's speculations; if he had, he paid no attention to them; he was pursuing his own train of thought.

"Only two months since! There has not been time enough!" he jaculated.

"Oh, you know how impulsive Di is, and how she settles every thing in a moment, and takes a fancy to people at first sight."

"Does she?" inquired Jasper, haif sarcastically.

"Well, to some people," replied Mrs. Seaton. "If you remember, she was deveted to Anne frem the first minute she saw her, and almost broke her heart when she went away again."

wher, and almost broke her heart when she went away again."

"Anne is not every one; and Anne was very fond of her. And a peculiar expression passed over Jasper's face. "I don't remember any one else having found favor in her eyes."

"She was infatuatedly attached to Delly."

was infatuatedly attached to Dolly, "Beggars, and all the idle children in the village."

"She's a sort of waif and stray herself;
"She's a sort of waif and stray herself;

"Sto's a sort of wair and stray herself; so, perhaps, has a sympathetic feeling,"
"Very likely that may account for it, said Mrs. Seaton, a grateful ray of light breaking in upon her "and she's as willful and as idle as needs be—and, now I come to think of it, never did take a fancy to respectable people; the rector, for intance spectable people: the rector, for intance—she would go half a mile out of her way at any time rather than meet him, and she abus her even all through the service. shuts her eyes all through the sermone. I believe she determines not to listen to them. No—I suppose she doesn't take much to respectable sort of people."

"Such as ourselves," suggested Jasper,

"Such as ourselves," suggested Jasper, cynically.

"Jasper," returned Mrs. Seaton, "you know, just as well as I do, that she's as fanciful as the day's long; and she takes a liking here, and a dislike there, without any reason whatever."

ithing here, and a drame there, where reason whatever,"

Jasper again repeated—

"But two months—it's absurd!"

"Not at all. John Carteret was quiet, and a contrast to herself, and somehow they became friends—through opposition of character, I suppose; and before I thought of anything but their being likely to quarrel in the course of a fortnight, she came and toid me that she was engaged. One can't imagine how such an idea as marriage came into her head—she's seen nothing of the world."

"And therefore believes in it," added Jasper Seaton, bitterly. "This is the most should thing that ever happoned—it can't Jasper Staton, bitterly. "This is the most abourd thing that ever happened—it can't be thought of for a moment." "Why?" and Mrs. Seaton looked up, be-

She could not in the least follow out the arguments that were going on in her son's mind. She could not understand why he should wish to oppose a marriage that would relieve them of what she had long felt to be a burden. "Unless"—and here a new idea darted into her mind—"unless it may turn out a more expensive thing than her being unmarried. He might touch he ought to give her a bandsome dowry, as John Carteret has to make his way in the world; and doubtless he feels that he has spent enough upon her already, which I am sure he has dome. Yes, he must want her to marry a rich man. Of course he does, Jasper is far-accing; and I am afraid I have been very unwise in allowing this suggement; but it's impossible to contend with each a gitl as Di." She could not in the least follow out the girl so Di."

And Mrs. Seaton—without waiting for an answer to her "Why?"—fell perfectly satis-

versation—
"And so badly fleished. Where did all the rubbish come from?"
"Di choose it all, arranged it all, and was in an ecstasy of delight when it was flaished. I can't think why Di wanted to change at all; her old room was much more comfortable."

able."
"Then you have been up there, mother?"
"Yes."
"The only redecining feature is the collection of flowers just outside the west window."
"I did not look at it. It made me shudder to see Di standing out on that unprotected ledge, or roof, or whatever it may be—she calls it a balcony. There must be a railing put up."

"Only a square of carpet in the middle of

"Di said it was summer time, and it would

"Di said it was summer time, and it would be cooler without carpets."

"She used not to mind the heat. And a deal table with a worsted cloth on it."

"Bhe preferred it to any other."

"What can have come over the girl? She was se luxurious, so gorgoou in her tastes."

I don't know. I suppose it's a new phase of charsoter," answered Mrs. Seaton, a little wastify.

The sun was so overpowering now, that she was compelled to move more into the shade.

"I really think the blinds might be down "I really think the blinds might be down to-day—it is so hot," said she, involuntarily. "Hot!" replied her son, and be laid his hand upon hers. "Why, Jasper!" she exclaimed, "your hand is as cold as ice."

CHAPTER II.

THE OCCUPANT OF THE TWO ROOMS. A low room in the roof, with heavy bear A low room in the roof, with heavy beams across; one window looking northward along a low range of hills that sloped gently down into the broad valley, their sunny sides covered is spring with a glowing mass of apple blossom; another window opening upon the flat roof of an under projection, and looking towards the weat, where, evening after evening, the sun descended in a blaze of splendor, sinking to rest in a clear, cloudless space of purest daffodil or dropping down through amethyst and crimson bars, until the distant forest seemed on fire—and then the sun was lost.

"It was the pleasantest room in the house," Diana had declared, when Mrs. Seaton remonstrated with her on her choice

Seaton remonstrated with her on her choice
"She liked to have a room high up: is seemed nearer to heaven."
Whereat Mrs. Seaton wondered; for Whereat Mis. Seaton wondered; for Diana was not given to serious meditation. One side of the room was covered with an old piece of tapestry, a good deal faded in parts, but whereon one might trace part of the story of Persephone; and a classical dictionary, lying upon the table, showed that Di bad been making researches, and piecing the story together.

that Di had been making researches, and picting the story together.

There was, as Jasper had said, only a square of carpot in the middle of the floor, and that of somewhat diagy appearance.

The furniture of the apartment consisted of one or two shabby cane chairs, a low rocking chair, a footstool, some bookshelves, an old-fashioned press, and the deal table with the worsted table cover of which Jasper had spoken with so much contempt.

In fact, if one came to analyze the contents of the sitting-room, one would come to the conclusion that they consisted of an assertment of odds and ends that had been turned out of every other room in the assertment of odds and ends that had been turned out of every otter room in the house. There was, however, one exception to the shabbiness of the general belongings, and this was a beautiful inlaid cabinet, of indian workmanchip, upon which were placed a rare Indian vase—holding at the present time a boquet of large white lilies and a small Bible, splendidly bound, with a gold clasp, whereon was engraven, "Diana Ellis, the Gift of her Father." That it had scarcely ever been opened was very apparent; yet, that it was held in peculiar reverence was equally apparent also.

But, despite its isoongruous contents, the general effect of the room was not ungraceful; the general arrangement was harmonious, and the colors bleuded so as to be in nius, and the colors bleuded so as to be in keeping with the faded tapestry; whilst the brilliant scarlet of the table cover was toned down by the rasty bindings of the books that lay upon it, the dark mahogany chest, and a great china bowl, filled with roses of all shades, from faint blush to deep crimson, whose delicate fragrance stole through the room, and mingled with the scent that the ided so as to be in west wind wafted in from the flowers in the west wind wafted in from the flowers in the so-called balcony.

Into this room and the adjoining one—that served as a bedroom, and might have belonged to an ascetto—had Diana Edits moved all her worldly possessions. As may be judged, they were not great; and had they been put up at auction, it would probably have punned thro most imaginative auctioneer to appraise them to any advantage. And in the midst of her household gots, with her head leaning against the back of the low chair, sat Diana herself, contemplating, with supreme content, the result of her with her head leaning against the back of the low chair, sat Diana herself, contemplating, with supreme content, the result of her labors.

Small, slender, with a slightly brunette complexion and yellow hair—regularly yellow, soft, tawny yellow, and no other color—her eyes were the deepest imaginable violet, with black lashes. She way, perhaps, more eingular-looking than presty; but, as one came to know the face, the singularity grew into something more charming even than regular beauty.

There was a securiful twist in the lips, and a defiant flash in the dark eyes, and a norvous elenoting of the haeds that lay as passive as it was possible for one of so mobile a nature to keep them—all teiling of a quick, passionate mature, unused to much control; whilst ber little foot tapped impattently on the floor. And yet Diana was comparatively at rest, Suidenly, a softer gicam stole into hereyes, and the lips parted in a half-amile, as she pushed back a lock of yellow hair that had fallen down, and a flush of happiness spread itself over her face like a halo of glory.

Over twelve years since she had come to live with Jasper Seaton and his mother.

fied that there was no occasion for one. So, folding her hands complescently, she basked in the greest yellow raps that cease barring into the recen, and fell to lamenting the day that Robort Ellis had died, and contained passing up and down the recen. Perhaps it was the heat that had sent the dark, angry flush across his face. Perhaps it was the chasting light that had caused bis eyebrows to contract; and yet the clear, dark eyes gleamed steadily from under them, as should bis properly of the engle's.

Presently he spoke again, but without the rightest reference to the intermediate conversion—

How bright everything was growing all at converting and converted without leaving once!

How bright everything was growing all at converting the converting was growing all at converting the deposition of a good-humored unduring the converting the converting the converting that had sent the dark, angry flush across that had sent the dark, angry flush across had converted unduring to the converting to the converting to the converting that the converting that had caused bis eyebrows to contract; and converting the converting that the converting the converting that the converting How bright everything was growing all at once!

Over twelve years since, a yellow, sickly locking child, under the convoy of a good-humored sunturnt captain of an East Indiaman, had arrived at Broadmead. It had glowed fartively from under its shock of tangled hair at Mrs. Seaton and her son, and had evidently not been favorably impressed—for it sereamed convulsively when they attempted to disengage it from the joval salier, to whom it clang tike a wild animal. But when at length the separation was accomplished, and the captain drove off, the child crounded in a corner of the room and subbod until it could sob no longer; and, exhausted, fell asicep with its head on a footstool, and the unkempt locks falling about, and the yellow face swellen and patched with red.

"What a very ugly child!" said Mrs. Seatom, contemptating the new arrival.

The swellen eyell's slowly unclosed, and the child gazed fixedly upon her.

"Hush, mother, she is not asleep,"

"Noncense, these Indian children don't understand much English; and this one ascems a supid hitte thing."

"Take c.re; she's doubtless picked up a good deal coming over."

"Captain, captain—me want me's cap-good deal coming over."

"Captain, captain—me want me's captain," wailed the child, tain," walled the child,
"The captain's gone away—you won't see him any more," raid Mrs. Seaton. "You must get up now, and be a good child, and not cry any more."

" Me not be good! Me not'tay here! Cap-tain, captain!"
And she began to sob louder than ever, and to scream so vehemently, that Mrs. Seaton, retiring to a distance, regarded her in despair.

"What on earth shall we do with her, Jasper ?"
Jasper approached, and tried his powers of consolation.

of consolation.

"Det away—det away, bad man!" and she raised her hand, and dealt so sharp a blow on Jasper's cheek, that he started with she raised her hand, and dealt so sharp a blow on Jasper's cheek, that he started with surprise.

"Pas-ionate—a young tigress!" commented Mrs. Seaton, contemplating her from her position of security. "One would think her father had been a heathen; at any rate, she's been brought up one."

Jasper looked round the room in search of some diversion, and his eye fell upon a dish of strawberries that was on the table. He put some on a plate, and approaching cantiously, offered them to ker.

"Noo strawberries," asid he.

The child turned sway her head languidly. "Very nice," he continued, encouraged by her apathy; and he held the plate nearer. Still she kept her face turned away; and he laid it down beside her.

The cold edge touched one little brown hand. She started round; and raising the plate, flung it and its contents across the room. The beautiful china shivered into fragments, and one of the strawberries, rebounding against Mrs. Seaton's delioate silk dress, left thereon a crimson stain.

"You naughty child," she exclaimed, starting up, "you very naughty, had child!" And she gave her a sharp slap on the arm.

The child uttered no cry, but looked up at Mrs. Seaton with a perplexed look, in which amasement, anger, and terror were strangely mingled. Then crouching back into the corner, she glared at Jasper and his mother like a savage creature brought to bay.

"I don't know what is to be done with mother like a savage creature brought to bay.

"I don't know what is to be done with her. I can't let Prime be worried with her. She'll be one person's work, that is very certain. She must be tamed before she can come into civilized society."

And Mr. Beaton, struck with a sudden idea, rang the bell.

"Send Bolly here."

Dolly was the under-housemaid, who had recently been promoted from her village home te a situation at the great house. A buxom, comely country girl, strong and stalwart, but withal coft and tender-hearted especially to dumb animals and young children.

dren.
"Dolly," said Mrs. Seaten, "you've been accustome! to children—see if you can make anything of that untamed one."
"Poor little soul!" said Dolly, compas-

"Poor little soul!" said Dolly, compassionately.

Dolly had been on the lookout for some days for the little Indian orphan, who was coming hundreds of miles over the sea.

"Naughty little soul!" responded Mrs. Seaton; though I doub; if she's got one. Take her away at once, and don't les me see her again to-day."

Dolly approached her charge.

"Don't it ory, darling; poor darling, poor birdie," she said, in a sort of cooing voice, as though she were speaking to a pet pigoon.

"Come with its own Dolly, there's a love. Hush it, hush it," coosed Dolly, though the child cid not utter a sound. "Hush it," child cid not utter a sound, " Hush it.

ontinued Dolly, soothingly, as she approached. "Poor pigeon, poor pigeon—husb it, bush it!"

There was some fascination in the voice or mauner; for the child, thus apostrophized, suffered Dolly to take it in her arms, and, laying it hesed on Dolly's shoulder, was carrieg off in triumsh.

carried off in triumph.

Jasper and his mother looked at each

Jasper and me solutions of the color.

"Wouderful!" said Jasper.

"Some people have a way with children," said Mrs. Scaton. "I have not. Though I scarcely call that a child; she seems like a young fiend—or, at any rate, a changeling, if one could believe in fairy superstitions. What eyes she has!—they are scarcely human."

human."

Jasper scaton was tempted to agree with his mother, and to vituperate Robert Ellis for leaving him guardian to his child.

"She must be sent to school as soon as possible," he said. "I suppose they will know how to teach her there."

Mrs. Seaton sighed.

"If Robert Ellis did like Anne, and Anne this him him to be that the third."

"If Robert Ellis did like Aune, and Anne didn't like him. I don't see that it was any reason why he should leave his child a burden to our family," she said.
Which reasoning revened rational enough. "He was my father's friend. Besides, I am in Robert Ellis's debt," answered Jasper, shortly.

am in Robert Ellis's debt," answered Jasper, shortly.

"Well, you're in a way to repay it with interest," returned his mother.

And Jasper answered, "So it seems."

Thus Dians had arrived like a whirlwind, apreading confusion in the household of Broadmead. And she continued on in a whirlwind. She and Mrs. Seaton appeared to act as irritants so each other; and therefore it came to pass that Diana was given over entirely to Dolly, who was installed as nursemaid in a reacote part of the house.

Consequently, Dolly was in the avventh heaven of importance and delight; and Diana infinitely preferred the nursery domains to those of the drawing-room. The on the pianeforte.

"Should she not be sent to school?" asked Jaspar.

But Mrs. Seaton demurred.

"It was a useless expense; but, as the seemed to have a talent for munic, the could take lessons from the village organist. If a girl could read and write, and had can accomplishment, it was enough for her. Perhaps the might have a voice, and many girls were married for their singing. Farhaps Diana might be, if people did not find out what a fearful temper the had."

So Diana took lessons from the village organist, and had an old plane sent up into the nursery, upon which she practised half the day, to her heart's great content.

The village organist was a foreigner, a munical genius. He was enthusiastic over his papil; and Diana progressed marvellously.

The music appeared to have a baneficial influence upon her.

"Music hath charms to soothe the marries."

The music appeared to have a nonencial influence upon her.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast." quoted Mrs. Scaton; and she exulted in the success of her plan.

Still the drawing-room visits were generally productive of a storm.

"If you would only try to be good, Miss Diana," said Dolly, after one of these constants recogning outbreaks.

Diana," said Doily, after one of these constantly recurring outbreaks.

"It's of no use trying, for I don't know how," returned Diana. Then, after a medicative pause, she asked, "How did you become good, Doily?"

"Me, miss!" returned Dolly, evercome by the ruggestiom, and recurring to her early teaching. "I'm not good, miss—I'm maturally a child of wrath, miss; but I try to do my daty."

"I thought your mother lived in the rilege.

to de my daty."

"I thought your mother lived in the village, and your father was Thomas, the gardener, Dolly," returned Diana, with a puzaled look.

"So they are, miss. It's something else I mean. It's all in the Catechism. I learned it when I wann't as old as you, miss. It's all in the Prayer Book, if you would like to look at it."

And Dolly looked eagerly at her young charge, who had hitherto persistently de-clined all Dolly's well-meant efforts at religious instruction.

"Should I be good if I learned the Catechism?"

"You'd be a deal better, miss, no doubt."

"I will look at is," said Diana, condescendingly. "Get it."

Dolly brought out the Prayer Book, and, turning to the Catechism, selected the passage relating to one's duty towards one's neighbor. Diana took it, and read attentively until she came to the sentence, "to order myself lowly and reverently to all my betters."

"What does to recommend."

"What does 'reverently' mean?" she asked.
"Humbly and with respect," responded asked.

"Humbly and with respect," responded Dolly, promptly.

"Who are my betters?"

"The rector, mise, and the inistress, and Mr. Jasper, and—"

But Diana interrupted her.

"If that is what the Catechism teaches, I'm not going to learn it." And abe closed the book deliberately, and gave it back to Dolly. "I believe," she continued, after a moment's consideration, "that they are not as good as you are. You're not as greedy as the rector, and you don't go into passions and be cross, like Mrs. Seaton and Jasper. Besides, you always speak the truth. I should think you were my better, Dolly."

"Oh! no, miss," replied Dolly, shocked at the beterodox idea. "I'm not your better, miss; it's only the mistress and such like."

"Oh!" said Dians, nodding her head, gravely—"then, Dolly, I have no opinion of the Catechism."

And thus ended Dolly's ethical and religious effort.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Tough Story.

The following story is related in a private letter from London? About ten years ago, a young American from Now York—Walter Hastings by name—dioing in London, in company with Lord C ——, expressed the opinion that solitary confinement in a dark cell was not so dreadful a punishment as had been represented. His lordship—so goes the tale—offered Hasting £10,000 if he would undergo entire seclusion for ten years. The proposition being agreed to, a cell was fitted up in Lord C ——'s town house. It was from twelve to fifteen feet square. The prisoner was to be allowed candles, a few books, writing materials, plain food—the latter served by a man who was not to be latter served by a man who was not to be books, writing materials, plain food—the latter served by a man who was not to be seen. In this way Hastings has been living for a decade of years, his term expiring about the first of the present month. He is now released, and has received, we suppose, his hard-earned money. He emerges from his dungeou in rather a dilapidated condition, appearing, though only thirty-five, like a man of sixty-five years of age, his frame stooping and his steps tottering, his face sallow, his hair and brard white, his voice tremulous, and his speech hesitating. The question is, who is Water Hasting? And why, during all this cheerful seclusion, has no relative of his ever been interviewed? and how has it been kept out of the papers.

Advantages of Being a Stupid Man.

He never makes enemies of his friends, for he does not belabor their reputations behind their backs. He is too bonest to insuit any one, and, therefore, has ne need of coffee and pistols. He is too unique in his stupidity to believe he can be insulted, and, therefore, duals are made up and fought without him. He does not run for Congress—berein he is truly a wise man—for his fallings lean too near to virtue's side to be available. The devil needs smart men, and for his purposes "stupid" would be worth little. No one asks him to make a speech at a wedding breakfast or at camp meeting, and, therefore, he is guiltless of foolishness and aburdities incident to such efforts. If he is married, the odds are ten to one that his wife proposed to him, and carried him off in leap year. Then the momentous tast of naming the babies devolves not upon him; he would name them something that would be a millstone about their teck. His wife knows this, and names the babies after her favorite characters, with an eye to their future cocupation of the Presidental chair. Thus is he saved from inflicting an eternal injury upon his children. Advantages of Being a Stupid Man-

Green kids poisoned a Poughk lady's hands.

200

THE SABBATH BELL.

How evectly through the lengthened dell, When April's aim are mild and cicar, Floats chiming up the Sabbath bell, In secteaced scheen to the car? "Come, gentle neighbors, come away," So does the velcome anumous say; "Come, friends and kindred, 'tis the time," So seems to peal the Sabbath chime.

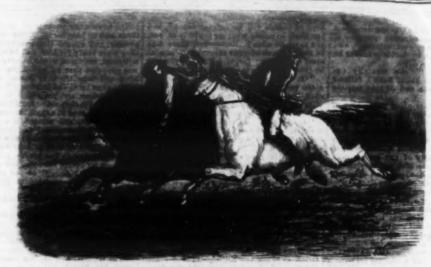

Done are the week's debasing cares,
And worldly way and worldly will,
And earth itself an espect wears
Like Heaven so bright, ee pure, so still;
Hark how by turns each meliow note
Now low, now louder, seems to float,
And falling with the wind's decay,
Like softest music dies away.

"And now," it says, "where Heaven resorts, Come with a meek and quiet mind; Oh, worship in these earthly courts, But leave your earth-born thoughts be-hind."

And neighbors, while the Sabbath bell Peals slowly up the winding dell, Come friends and kindred, let us share The sweet and boly rapture there.

Wonderful Escapes,

ACO.

BARON TRENCK ESCAPING WITH LIEUTERANT SCHELL.

Come fixured and Mandred, and under the second of the seco

"About serve o'clock, the low frost was succeeded by frest and smootlight." The section of the low frost was succeeded by frest and smootlight. The section of the low frost was a succeeded by frest and smootlight. The section of the low frost was the l

THE ABBUCTION.

THE ABBUCTION.

A Tale of the Swins Alps.

WAITTEN FORTHS SATURDAY SWIND FOOT
BY JORFH H. CLOUD.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAFT WEEK)
How long the remained amountedous the did not know, but when he neede do was lying on a kind of mat, in a gioony, dismallooking place, which was dirily lighted by a liamp surpended a few feet from he for chips of the light of the control of the light of the control of the light of t her heart, she would have felt almost as well as though nothing had happened. She now remembered for the first time, that when she had walked down to the ledge the previous evening, she had taken her watch with her, and was a little surprised to find that she still retained it. She handly draw it from its pizer, and found it still running; she opened it and noticed that it was aix o'clock—and she now knew that eleven hours had peaced since her abduction, and that it was morning.

A tear started from her aye as she thought of her once happy home, and of the loved friends from whore she had been so cruelly taken, and whom she feered she would never be permitted to see again. And Wilhelm, oh, where was he? What cruel fate had prevented him from returning to her? That he had fallen a victim to Morset's hatred and jealousy, she no longer doubted, but whether living or dead she hardly daned to conjecture. Her suspense became terrible, and in the bitterness of her heart, she turned to Morset, who had been cleasly scutining her all the while, and reminded him of the promise he had made her.

"Tell me the meaning of all this," she again pleaded; "and take me to the dear home of which you have so cruelly robbed me, if you do not have so cruelly nobed me, if you do not intend to murder me here, or kill me with this toruring anspense."

He came instantly to her aide, and falling upon his knees, he grasped her hands and without giving her time to recist, pressed upon them a passionate kise—and thou in a vehomently passionate manuer, he exclusioned.

"Oh Idutha, Idutha! my dariing! my dariing! You blame me, and perhaps justly, bind yourselves by the most solemn oaths never to reveal anything or in any way to avenge yourselves upon me. Kefuse, and your lover shall suffer the most horrible death it is in my power to inflict upon him."

"Oh orael, cruel wretch that you are, you tell me that you love me, and then inflict tell me that you love me, and then inflict upon me such terrible misery. Oh Morset, if you love me, for heaven's aske have com-passion on me! Oh tell me where he is and let me go to him!" she exclaimed, wringing her hands and weeping bitterly.

"Would you see him, Idutha? Then come with me, and you shall see him; but remember that it shall be the last time on earth till you behold his corpse. Come, fol-low me."

low me."
And taking a light in one hand and a pistol in the other, he walked to the farther end of the cave and proceeded to unlock the door. At the sight of the weapon Idutha shuddered and sorank back, but she reflected that he could only do his worst, and flected that he could only do his worst, and that he would is all probability do that whether she followed him or not, and her desire to see her lover impelled her on. Morset bent low and went is, for the entrance to the adjoining room was not more than three feet high. She followed, and a feeling of horror fell upon her as she entered the dismai place. Her asxiety was terrible, and she trembled violently. As she entered, Morset set the lamp on a projecting rook.

rook.

When she had proceeded far enough to stand erect, she raised her eyes, and there, upon a rough stone and within ten feet of where she stood, sat poor Wilhelm, securely heard with strong, heavy chains. He turned where she stood, and poor Wilbeim, scorely bound with strong, heavy chains. He turned and gased for a moment in surprise at seeing a woman exter his dark and loatorome cell, and as the clanking of his chains smore upon her ear, she untered a wild c.y. Her heart seemed oppressed by a heavy weight—the weight of a hopeless, despair—and for a moment she was unable to move.

FOR WILL

while he retained his pissed with the other.

A pitcous mean escaped her at first, and then she burst into a passionate fit of weeping.

"Scoundrel!" shouted Wilhelm, as he beheld the quivering form of his beloved, and saw her helpiess condition and her hopeless misory..." May the vengeance of heaven fall upon you, as it surely will. Merses, your day of judgment will come!"

"Aha!" returned the villain, with a sardonic haugh, "I perceive you are a dangerous man! But why waste words?

"Wilhelm, would you see Idutha liberated, and would you sacrifice anything to procure her freedom?"

"You knew, villain, that I desire her liberty, and that I would make any reasonable sacrifice."

"Then she may be released from here, and so may you, upon the terms that I now offer, and no other." Here he reiterated the proposition he had made to Idutha, and then added, "It can be of no possible advantage for you to refuse to accept my terms. Accept and she shall be made happy, if it is in my power to make her happy, and you, Wilhelm, shall have your freedom. Refuse and you die, after having ouffered the most excruciating tortures. Show your magnanimity, then, and save her whom you profess to love se well, and save yourself."

"Incarnate villain! wratch, miscreant!" exclaimed Wilhelm, whemmently. "Did you suppose that neither I nor that siniess girl possessed one spark of honor? Away with your base offers! Of what possible advantage could it be to Idutha to be linked with such a fiend, when you know she hates, nay even loathes you? As for myself, I do not fear your threats. I am ready to die for her, unless it pleases God to deliver me, and you dare not, you cannot murder that innocestigil. God will deliver her."

Then turning to Idutha, he said: "Idutha, darling, you will not, and God will deliver you, dearest; I feel it, deep down in my heart, that He will deliver you from the power of your vile persecutor. Oh, do not yield!"

"You need entertain no fears, dear Wilhelm; I will never be his wife. Even should we both have to die, i puty us both."

"Away! away!" exclaimed Morset, angrily, pushing idutha toward the door.
"Away to your own room. But stay," he continued in the same impetuous manner; "feast your eyes upon each other just one moment, and remember that it will be the last time on eartn!"

A wail of unutterable anguish broke from the lips of the poor girl, as if from a breaking heart.

the lips of the poor girl, as if from a breaking heart.

"There, that will do; now go," said Morset, tauntingly, again thrusting her toward the door.

"Farewell, my dear Wilbeim, farewell, and may God bless you; may He be with you and comfort you in your sufferings. If we meet not again on earth, I will meet you ere long in heaves. Farewell!" Idutha said, with a choking sob.

She had scarcely time to hear her lover's affectionate response, ere her abductor had meet hot again on narth, I will meet you ere long in heaves. Farewell!" Idutha said, with a choking sob.

She had scarcely time to hear her lover's affectionate response, ere her abductor had thrust her through the door into the other room, re-entered it himself and closed the door. Site sank tremblingly into her chair, and for a long, long time she sat there, silently weeping. Hour after hour passed away and it was again night, as she found by examining her faithful time keeper. Moreet had spent most of the day pacing back and forth in the cave in an uneasy manner. Neither of them had spoken a word, except once when he requested her to partake of some food he had prepared for her; but she turned away from him without speaking, and refused to eat anything.

But when night had oome, she remembered that he had not taken Wilheim anything to eat since she had awakened that meraing, and turning to him she said:

"Burely, Morset, you cannot be so cruel as to starve poor Wilheim to death. Is this the way you would manifest your oft-repeated affection to me, when you know that your cruelty to him is the severest punishment you can possibly inflict on me? Oh, will you not give him semething to eat?"

"Yes, Idutha," he replied; "for one more weak he shall have food, for I wish to allow you time to consider the importance of eaving both him and yourself by complying with the terms I have proposed. But remember, Idutha, my clemency shall be extended no farther than till that time. When that time shall have expired his food shall be withheld, and he shall die of starvation unless you yield." So saying, he placed upon a dish some bread, a piece of cold meat, a pie and some water, and carried it to Wilheim. When he came baok he prevailed on Idutha to eat, and then ate some himself.

At about nine o'clock she observed that Morset went frequently to the door by which the oave was entered from without. He appeared to be attentively listening for something. Soon three light rape were heard; this was repeated three or four times,

TURDAY SYRBHER POST.

Company of the bound of the boun "Oh Identar I Identa " mid Wilhelm with serving cannifor as he recognized her, " ever yow here and in the hands of that wreiched man ?"

Whe sprang forward, and sinking upon his breast, the hisrow her arras around him and "Wilhelm, oh Wilhelm and tyre dishing upon his breast, the hisrow here arras around him and "Wilhelm, oh Wilhelm and tyre dishing" and the soul and a serving and the soul and a serving and the soul and the soul of this terrible in the presentity Here is a champited to forward, and not here are any anying as he did no, "Come, my pretty one, there has been enough quite enough of this hough and hisroy for be present." But they clamp to each will-halm head, anying.

"Lock here! Identa, do you set that De not come and the service and by ——, I will use is if you do not come. Alarmed for Wilhelm's anglety the reliased her subrace, and has togenated they the hisrolity and and her subrace, and has togenated the wild have been been comed, white he reliated his pisted with the other. A parket will be presented for white they include the common of the terribip ways and head fare with one hand, white he reliated his pisted with the other. A parket will be a passed and her subrace, and has togenated the common of the common money with her, and it was absurd to presume that he would release them on the strength of a verbal pledge, and then present his claim after he had liberated them, especially as a considerable part of her fortune would not fall into her hands for more than two years. Thus vanished all hope of effecting her escape by any effort is was possible for her to make. Oaly her trust in God was left. In Him had she ever put her trust, and to Him alone did she now look for deliverance; and hopeless as her condition was concerned, she still endeavored to exercise faith in God. And burying her face in her hands, ahe poured forth her soul in earnest, silent prayer.

While thus engaged a hand was laid upon her shoulder, and a voice said—"Iduths!" She raised her head, and looked up. It was Morset who spoke.

"Iduths," he said, "the time has now almost arrived when you will be favored with a last opportunity of accepting the proposals I have made you. To-morrow you will be granted the last privilege of deciding the fate of your lover and yourself. Can you be so obstinate as to refuse compliance with my offer now, when you know that your refusal will be fellowed by such fearful consequences? I shall not long argue the case with you. I have only now to say, accept, and I will do as I have said; refuse, and to-morrow morning Wilheim will have eaten this last morsel, and I will take you away to some distant land and place you where all suffered!"

It was enough for the sensitive heart of the good woman; she knew that something dreadful had happened; she had for some time meurned her as dead—and they wept together. When they had regained their composure, the lowers related all that had happened; and Wilbeim also told the particulars of his capture by Morset and Holstein,

CURLS! One package of Prof. Lood.
Curl the straightest hair of cither sex, (without injury,) into wary ringiests, or heavy massive Curia, in every case, or money refunded. Price 26 cents per package, post-paid; or three for 50 cents. Address & HOLBROOK, Uzbridge, Mass.

37-11

Podesie

"Without advertising I should be a p nam to-day."—H. T. Elshabeld. "I advertising by productions and m neare,"—Nicholas Longworth. "Advertising bas furnished me with

P. T. Barnum, the noted exhibitor, as-cribes his success in socumulating a million of dollars in ten years to the unlimited use of printer's ink.

Rates of Advertising. Thirty cents a line for the first insertion. Twenty cents for each additional is Payment is required in advance

AGENTS WANTED. Agents are wanted to obtain subscribers for thi per-the SATURDAY EVENING POST. Good Com missions allowed. Address H. Peterson & Co., 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

AGENTS WANTED FOR

WONDERS

OF THE WORLD."

ONE THOUSAND ILLUSTRATION goet, best selling, and most attractive as a book ever published. Send for Circular as, at once. Address U. S. PUBLISHEN. I Brosme St., New York, 188 south Casage, Il., and 177 W. et Pouch Sc., Circling, May 27-18.

A CERTAIN CUME for CANCERS
WENS cont for $1. Was ranted to care,
Address
May 17-41cov
Whort Bend, M.
whort Bend, M.

R. DOLLARD, 513 CHRSTNUT ST., PREMIER ARTISTE

Inventor of the celebrated GOSSAMER VENTI-LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOUPACES.

For Wigs, Inches.

No. 1.—The round of the head.

a.—com forehead to neck.

a.—From ear to ear over the top.

4.—From ear to ear round the forehead.

b. Cover the top.

4.—From car to ear round the forehead.

He has always ready for eals a splendid stock of Gents' Wigs, Toupees, Ladies' Wigs, Haif Wigs, Prizots, Braids, Curls, &c., beautifully manufac-tured, and as cheap as any establishment in the Union. Letters from any part of the world will re-

Private rooms for Dyeing Ladies' and Gentlemen'

PSTCHOMANCY — Any befor providence can make $1000 a month, secure their even happiness and independence, by reading Payshemancy, Fascination or flood (Loraning, 600 pages. Fall instructions to such the contract of the pages. Fall instructions to such this power over more or animals at will, have in Menneytein, become France or Writing Sodiums, Division was the contract of the con

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

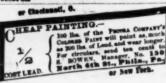

which are always afflicting and too often fataling and the large of the same of the

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass., PRACTICAL AND ANALYTICAL CHEMISTS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

MONEY EASILY MADE With our Stencil and Key-Check Outst.

PURIFY THE BLOOD AND BEAUTIFY THE COMPLEXION BY USING

HELMBOLD'S CATAWBA GRAPE-JUICE PILLS

HELMBOLD'S

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED

FLUID EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA

In the Spring and Summer months the system undergoes a change. This is the time to use good blood-resewing, parifying, and invigorating medicines. "Helmbold's Fluid Extract Sarasparilla," and "Helmbold's Fluid Extract Garge-Jutes Pills," are the best and most reliable.

One bottle of "Helmbold's Fluid Extract Sarasparilla" equals in strength one gallon of the syrup or decection as made by druggists; and a wine-glass added to a pint of water equals the celebrated Liebon Diet Drithe—a dalightful and healthful beverage.

The "Grape-Jules Pill" is composed of Fluid Extract of Catawba Grape-Jules and Fluid Extract Rhuberb. Useful in all diseases requiring a catherite remedy, and far superior to all other purgatives, each as rails, magnesia, &c. "Helmbold's Grape-Jules Pill" is not a potentied pill, put up a these eccinarily rended, but the result of ten years' experimenting and great care in preparation. Bafe for and taken by children. He nances; no griping pains; but mild, pleasant, and safe in operation. Two bottles of the "Fluid Extract of Catawparilla" and one bottle of the "Grape-Jules Pills," are worth their weight is gold to those suffering from had blood, poor complexion, headache, nervounness, wakefulness at night, continents, and irregularities; and to those suffering from broken and delicate constitutions it will give new blood, new vigor, and new life. The "Catawba Grape Pills" are done up with great care and in handsome bottles, and will surpass all those vended in wooden boxes, and carelersly prepared by isoxperienced men, comparing with the English and French style of manufacturing. All of H. T. Helmbold's preparations are Pharmaceutical, not a single one being patented, but all on their own merite. Prepared by

H. T. HELMBOLD,

Practical and Analytical Chemist, Crystal Palace Pharmacy, 504 Broadway, New York.

P. S .- HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUGHU has gained a world-wide fame.

$1(0) TO $25(0) per month guaranteed. Sur Agents everywhere, ecling our Patent Silver Mould White Wire Clothes Lines. Busines granaments For full particulars, address Granam Wins Mills, Philadelphia, Pa. may20-4t machine in the market, men with capital are should ing it to their advantage to make the sale of this machine their exclusive businers. Agents wanted in wancetyjed territory. Machines guaranteed as represented.

Addiess * Domicastic?* Sewing Machines Company, 98 Chambers Street, New York, or Toledo, Ohio.

1,700,000 ACRES IN IOWA! 180,000 Acres in Nebraska!! THE

R. R. LAND COMPANIES OF IOWA AND NEBRASKA,

OFFER THE ABOVE LANDS TO SETTLERS, at $2 to $10 per scre, on time at six per cent, or for cash These Companies have determined to have their lands settled at the earliest possible day, in order to increase, the business of their itsilrosids, who have now all completed, and therefore offer the HEST LANDS in the BEST STATES, at the LOWEST PRICES. We sell at our Offices in Cedar Rapids, Iows, and at No. 1 La Salle street. Chicana. Kalifued fares west of those places R.R. No. 225 to bolders of exploring telecta of R.R. Lares to colonies, or portion of 25. or more. Colored Maps, showing all the lands in both states, sent for 80 or nice. PREE, to all parts of the world, Apply to.

Land Exploring Tickets,

may 12-128. Codar Rapids, lows.

The only nest and reliable manner of MairKiNG LIN.

EN with INDEL.

one of our superior and WARRANTED silver nameplate. Various styles made to order, with bottle of WARRANTED (adelible ink, Brush, Box, &c., complete for FIFTY CASTS. Sent by mail for 60 cents, provage paid. Sample carc, with twenty-five different paiterns, sent free, on application. Address
THEODORE RUE. Quaker City Struct. Wonks,
#38 Arch Street, Philadelphia. mh4-18t

FOR SALE, ix Per Cent. Loan of the City of Wil-liamsport, Pennsylvania,

FREE OF ALL TAXES. At 85 and Accrued Interest.

These Bonds are made absolutely secure by Act of Legislature compelling the City to levy sufficient tax to pay interest and principal.

P. S. PETERSON & CO., NO. 39 S. THIRD STREET,

PHILADELPHIA,

A CHOICE INVESTMENT.

THE FIRST MORTGAGE

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD LAND GRANT BONDS

WEST WISCONSIN RAILWAY CO. Principal and Interest Payable in Gold.

The Pond upon which these Bonds are issued will form, when constructed, one of the most important links in the railway system of the Morth-Wont, it commences at Tomah and extends across the state of Wisconsin to 8t Paul. It is 15t mines in length of Wisconsin to 8t Paul. It is 15t mines in length or which 190 are built; will have, when completed, direct connection with the Northern Pacific, and It and It line, with a saving of 100 miles over existing routes.

$1.000 REWARD.

$1.000 REWARD.

$1.000 REWARD.

an air line, with a saving or low mins over existing routes.

The Covapany has a LAND GRANT OF 1,000,000 ACMES OF LAND along the line of its Road, exempted by the state from taxation for fifteen years, and which can be sold for much more than the cost of ballding the road.

The Bonds are a first and only Mortgage upon the Road Land Grant and entire property of the Company. They are convertible into exock at par, receivable as each for lands, and are payable in gold at the end of 15 years.

Price 90, and interest in currency, at which figure they not to the purchaser 9 per cent per annum. Pamphlets, Maps, &c , with further information, can be obtained at the office of

WHITE, MORRIS & CO., No. 29 Wall-84, and GWYNNE, JOHNSON & DAY, No. 16 Wall-Mt., New York,

Bankers and Pinancial Agents for the Company. RUPTURE

CURED by Dr. SHERMAN'S PATENT APPLI-ANCE AND SUPPURE CURATIVE, without the injury experience of room the use of trasser. Pamphlets illustrating bad cases of Hupdure, before and after cure, with other infore ailso of interest to the raptured, market on receipt of ten cents.

Andrews

Andrews

By J. A. HREMMAN, ap8 by

Agents! Read This! WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY of Six per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to rell our new and wonderful invention. Address M. WAGNER & CO., Murhall, Mich.

$30. AGENTS. $30.

AGENTS, you can make $30 per week and expenses working for us. It you want permanent, honorable, and pleasant work, apple for particulars. Address spreading to LLW is MORRIS & CO., 150 Failure, to LLW is MORRIS & CO., 150 Failure, apple 18t.

BERKSHIRE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

OF PITTSFIELD, MASS.

THE. F. PLUNKETT, President. L. H. CANWELL, Secretary. EDWARD BOLTWOOD, Treasurer.

PHILADELPHIA OFFICE. S. W. COR. LITH & CHESTNUT STS.

The Advantage of Such Protection. New Yosse, March 11th, 1070. no. late of New York, incured a lew no Suckethire Life Incurance Company

A Special Law of the State of Massachusetts.

ANNUAL CASE DIVIDENDS.

As your Case Divinuous Incapasa, the future payments which you make will gradually necessare Divinuous may be added to the Policy, and ar-never for foiled by the non-payment of Franciums but may do any time be converted into cash.

WM. THOMSON, M. D. Medical Examiner. At office daily, from 19 to 1 P. M.

GOOD AGENTS WANTED.

For information, apply at the Home Office or to the tellowing

GENERAL AGENTS:

G. S. HUBBARD, Jr., 121 Dearborn St., Chicago, llinois.
IRA A. CHURCH, (for Central Illinois,) Atlanta, lilinois.
GHEENE & ROYSE, Washington St., Indianapo ile, indiana.

HENLY MARSHALL, 105 Wisconsin St., Milwaukes Wisconsin.

F. J. FOSS, & E. A. GAMWELL, 105; Washington St., Henton, Massachus-tis,

J. H. FRANCIS, & J. H. DASKAM, 171 Broadway,

New York.

W. H. GRAVES, Cor. Eleventh and Chestaut Sts.,

Philadelphia, Pennylvonia.

JENKINS & MAYON, 349 River St., Troy, New York. Tork. HINE & HILLMAN, 9 Public Square, Cleveland,

Dhio,
F. D. MORRISON & BRO., Baltimore, Waryland,
L. S. TWOMBLY, 50 Exchange St., Portland faine. A. S. COPPIN, Providence, Rhode Island. J. F. FEAHL. Fair Haven, Connecticut. THOMAS DOWSE, Pendicton Block, Duluth

THUMAS Innesota. C. C. VICK, Conneit Binffs, Iowa. E. S. Wils ELLII, Detrois, Vichigan. HERMAN FIELD, Pitisburgh, Ponnsylvania. apl-m

AGENTS LOOK! Patent Lines Stamp and Card Printer, will ombed awthing. A novelty overybody wasts—convealed, neefal, and un quely beautiful. Success Sure.—38 to $30 per day easily made. Any name, sent post-paid on receipt of price ($1.00) Liberal terms to agents. Send for Circulars to GRURCHILL & TEMPLE PON, Manufacturers, 618 Broadway, N.Y. app9-dm

$1.000 REWARD.

DOUBTING PEOPLE.

There is hardly a thing or subject that some people will not doubt—and it is only by actual proof that they can be convinced; in nothing is this fact more clearly demonstrated that in Medicine. The summary has been been been as the subject to the cure of Seroius to no effect, there fore thick there is no cure for them. Now we want to dissipate those doubts, by showing that RCROFULA, in all its forms, can be cured by the use of the

SAMARITAN'S ROOT AND HERB

This has been proven to thousands, who are now sound and well. And to the doubtful, and these who have given up at hopes, we will furnish the Head and Herb Justeen free of charge, until a perfect cure is effected.

Persons availing themselves of this offer, will please send reference that the will pay when cured. HUOT AND HERB JUICES $1.35 per bottle.

BENNIOND & US., Proprisons, may 6.71

Brace forbids our stating particulars. If persons of either sex want business—home-st, lucrative light, and pleasant-st or near home-sto occupy their whole or spare time, address, stating where you saw this, J. N. KICHARDSON & Co., Boston, Mass. ap#8-1

AGENTS WANTED for "Convent ed," by EDITH O'GOMMAN, Resuped Nau, whose disclosures are thrising and starting. Cons. Pra-limin Cony-wx, Hartford, Com. april-12:

WHISKERS! One package of Prof.
pound will force the beard to grow thick and beavy on the smoothest face (without tainry) in 31 days, or money refunded; 25 cas. a package, post-paid;
250r 50 cents.
BUGAN JONES,
any 64.
Ashiand, Macs.

A NEW WAY TO MAKE LOTS OF MONEY.

PATENTS. MEST IN USE PRINCIPAL BFFICE PHILADELPHIA.

DR. B. FRANK, PALMER, Pres A.ALam Ci

Murray Lanman's Florida Water.

The most lasting, agreeable, and refreshing of all perfumes, for use on the Handkerchief, at the Toilet, and in the Bath. For sale by all Druggists and Perfumers.

HOTEL EMPPRES' GUIDH, to Mix Drinks, marled for the cents. Address BIRD, Post Deposit, Maryland.

FREE TO BOOK AGENTS.

We will send a handrome Prospectus of our New Businessed Family Bible constaining over 300 fine cripture illustrations to any Book Agent, free harge. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING Co., Polla-dested.

P QUI MEN of Ane "PRENCH WRITING PA-) PEN" (assorted taney colors,) ran, post-paid, for $1. Address, B. FOX & CO, Station "A," New York City. Mackenzie's Horticultural Establishment, Broad and Columbia Avenue,

PHILADELPHIA

BOOK
AGENTS.

THE AMERICAN BOOK
COMPANY 62 William
M., New York, want a few more good Agente to sell the lepopular works. They offer THE BEST STRUCK.
mb11-3m

50 PICTURES. "Valuable Recipes," and "Secrets Worth Knowing," sent free, Address Box 74, "Station A," New York city. mb11-20t.

$150 A MONTH: EMPLOYMENT: EX-THA INDUCAMANTH

A premium HOR'S and WAGON for Agents. We desire to employ agents for a term of seven years, to seil the Buckeye 2009 'buttle newing Machines. It makes a stitch alto on both sides, and is the heat low priced licensed machine in the world. W. A. HENDERSON & CO., Cleveland, Ohio, or St. Louis, jans?1-1y.

I BALTH FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

I will send, free, to Invalide, a certain Cure for Consumption, throughties, Categorh, de. A litera with stamp, Dr. N. PALMER, Brooklyn, N. Y. mbils 128.

LIPILIBERY OR FITTS.

A new cree for this distributes complished to now made hereing in Tractale of the darker pages of Forders and Native Hertal Proparations, published by D. O. Pentre Blacker. The presentations was discovered by has in each a providential instance that the second of the second

"Eh?" replied the man of coal.

"Is that anothrectice or bituminous?" again inquired the seeker of knowiedge, in a bland and conciliatory voice.

"If you mean that place where I'm dumpin' this here coal down, is's the fireroom," replied the son of tell, with a look of pity at the questions for his ignorance.

There were no more questions asked.

Hard on the Painter.

A painter was employed in painting a West indicately in the river, suspended on a stage under the ship's sters. The captain, who had just got alongside for the purpose of going on shore, ordered the boy to lit go the painter (the rope which makes fast the boat.) The boy instantly went aft, and let go the rope by which the painter's stage was haid. The captain, surprised at the boy's delay, oried out, "You lang dog, why den't you let go the painter?" The boy replied, "He's gone, sir, pots and all."

HARR.—It is related that a boarding-house keeper in Arkansas, was suce disturbed by a report that his bearders were mutinous because of that no frequent appearance of hash on the breakfast that Accordingly he descended to breakfast the next manning, laid one portentous horse-pisted on camb side of his plute at the head of the table, and said; "Any gentiaman who may be don't like hash, lies. Mr. Brown," he continued, turning to the nearest becker, "will you take hash ?"

THE QUORUM.—The New Orleans Times credits a colored member of the Legislature with the following felicity: "He said, with a gris which revealed his iveries to the very hinges, that 'dere was no breech ob de horum, for de korum was dere; ready for de count.' This outburst created a gleam of sunshine on what all clee was dark and

GOOD ADVICE.—An Elmira farmer wrote to Horace Greeley for advice as to the host hind of bees to keep, and received an answer to the effect that "husking bees" were the best, but in order to make them lay honey profitably, he must use a china nest egg, and blanket his bees when they are not on the nest—and feed them bran and mid-

A SMART BOY.—Janesville, Wisconsin, is noted for its smart boys. The latest story is told of a youth of six summers, who was taken to task by his aunt for some supposed offence which he persistently denied.

"New, Jonnie," said she, "I know you are not telling me the truth; I see it in your ore."

eye."

"Pulling down the lower lid of the organ which had well-nigh betrayed his veracity, Jennie exultingly replied:

"You can't tell anything about it, aunt: that eye always was a little streaked.

AN APT COMMENT. - The Christian Union An APT Comment.—The Christian Union tells a story of a drunken man who was converted on Friday, baptised on Saturday, received the Lord's Supper on Sunday, got drank on Monday, and was turned out of the church on Tuesday. His comment upon these "double-quick" ecclesiastical experiences was worthy of a man of more sobriety: "Anyhow, I was just as good when they turned me out as when they took me in."

Practical Illustration.—Tracker—
"Bay at the foot of the class, spell admittance."

Bay—"A-d-m-i-t-t-a-n-c-e—admittance."

Teacker—"Give the definition."

Boy—"Fifty cents; children half price; front seats reserved for ladies."

"Is ANYBODY waiting on you?" said a blite dry-goods olerk to a girl from the polite dry goods clerk to a girl from the country.

"Yes, sir," and the blushing damsel:
"that's my feller outside. He wouldn't come in."

The Buckelor in Love,

The Bucheler in Leve,

A backelor in love loses a dimple or two, grown molanoholy, reads poetry, and looks at the moon; is nervous about his neoktie and his gloves; consults his aunt as to what hind of hat girls meet admire; changes the style of his frequently, but is never astified. His countenance is as changeable as his recktie; now she has smited, and he is radiant; now she has frowned, and he wears a furrowed brow, and tooks in at the apotheracy's windows, and thinks of laudanum. He resolves to settle down, and limits himself as to cigars. If his laundress sends him home a shirt-front not quite perfect, it grieves him to the heart's core. He passes the most golden-haired damsel without a glance. He goes no more to see burleeques. His bouquets are anonymously sent to the object of his adoration. He is hourly afraid of revealing his condition of heart, but makes it manifest unconsciously to all beholders. Fiendish passions dwell within his breast. He hears that she has been at the opers with young Flazo, and wants to kill him. He says flercely in society that he approves of duelling, and that should he call a man out he would aim at his heart. When Vilikins asks him "if Dinah is not lovely?" he says, "Good heavens, no!" Only one is beautiful to him. He would like very much to work hard and make a fortune, but he cannot do it. He harrifles his employer hy entering as an item in the ledger "1,000 Angels." He is suddenly sees to clasp his brow at dinner-time, to the horror of the waiter, who, believing him to be choking, beats him on the back and offers him water. He goes sarreptitiously to so-called clair-to-gants, who describe "a light-complected young lady, sir, and her face turned your way, and her heart in her hand, if you can only get over the cross betwix you." He ishinks the cross is young Fiszoe, and grows dangerous. Suddenly you see the bucholor in love amazingly altered. He smiles, looks happy, eats comfortably, and node to his old enessy, Fiszo. The size of bottles is getting to be

The size of bottles is getting to be a centiting topic in England. It is claimed not a pint bottle ought to hold a pint.

PORTER, confidentially (train just moving off)—" I'd have an aye about me if I wor, ou, sir. This train don't stop no more fur forty minutes, and she must be a little crasy, for she's bin trying to kiss us porters."

[Delight of Rev. Jaber Veal.]

LOVE AND WAR.

He crossed the mountain-paths alone,
Quick-radiant as the tender morn;
He wood me by the altar-stone,
Where all our vows were sworn.
I heard the lark sing round his nest;
I heard, from love's divine colipse—
His breast was burning on my breast,
His lips upon my lips.
Pull sweet and glorfous were his words,
Like bells that ring with marriage glee;
But war leapt out of Hell, and stole
My lord from me.

Wild clarions shook the common weal;
The legions of the land arose;
They swept like glancing streams of steel,
To smite the nation's foss.
I saw the hosts at early moru.
Wind westward in their bearded might;

Wind westward in their bearded might;
I beard the giggling bugle-horn
Laugh at the drum's delight;
I beid the etirrup for his foot,
The beat in that bright company;
One word—one kiss—and then he flashed
Like light from me.

Came one at length with trembling pace, And fearful speech, and wandering eye; A thousand deaths were in his face, And one poor victory. Another and another came

Another and another came
With mangled limb and bleeding breast,
Who blew new-kindled fires of fame
Of heroes gone to rest:
Then came the laureled legions home,
To lovers waiting wistfully:
But oh, dear Lord, he never came

I know not if I waked or slept
That weary, weary, woeful night;
I only know I never wept—
My eyes were dry as light:
Yet in a trance I seemed to thread
The horrors of the battle-plain;
I found my hero cold and dend
Above the conquered slain:
And then he seemed to be alive;
I olasped him—oh, how tenderly!
'Twas but his ghost that soothed my arms:
God pity me!

A MOONLIGHT MARK.

WRITTEN FORTHE SATURDAY EVENING PO BY BURR THORNBURY.

roof, a landing might easily be effected, and a broad base for operations at the numerous chamber windows be secured. The dwelling did from these very facts, present an invita-tion to the house-breaker to select it for his work.

The family were of course aware of the opportunities afforded any one who might attempt unlawful entrance, and this knowledge seemed to increase their timidity. My cousin—as men often do, even when they are not entirely unconcerned themselves—jested at the alarm of the rest, but admitted that the fastenings had better be looked to.

After a pleasant evening in the parior—we imitted that the fastenings had better be looked to.

After a pleasant evening in the parlor—we were social and merry, notwithstanding the possible danger—everything was made secure below, and we retired for the night. Attending me to my chamber-door, my bost alipped a small bet lively-looking pistol into my hand, romarking that it was carefully loaded and might be of service in case we should be disturbed. I assured him that I did not feel much uneasiness. My ohief concern being the disagreeableness of sleeping during a summer night with closed window—declaring finally that mine should be down at the top some distance, if Beelzebab himself entered. I took the weapon, after learning that my cousin had reserved one for himself, and being familiar with its use and a good marksman, placed it under my pillow, with a feeling that it was indeed companionable.

panionable.

My chamber was at the west end of the house—where stood the tree already mentioned, and was the one occupied by the absent to a whenever he was home. However, as he would not return till the next Tuesday, its use was granted to me.

Securing my window at the bottom, and placing a cane, that I found in the corner, in such a position assign the securing in the corner, in day, its use was granted to me.

Securing my window at the bottom, and placing a cane, that I found in the corner, in such a position against the upper such that any attempt to lower it further would cause the cane to fall with a noise which I knew would arouse me, for I am not a heavy sleeper, I gave a parting look outside before retiring. It was a lovely summer night, the round, white moon rolled through a sky of melting azare, and objects were almost as discernible as by day. It was a poor night for barglars, se still and bright—but perhaps as they had been pretty bold elsewhere, they would venture. I sought my bed, and was soon sleeping, though not with entire tranquility. I dreamed that some one had entered the room, and ignering my presence entirely, was busily engaged in packing up the farniture. This seemed very absurd, especially as I was in a sort of passive wonder as to whether he would take the bod.

Disturbed by this reflection, I awoke and opened my eyes. All was silent; the moonlight lay white upon the floor, looking like a soft and tangible glory. Suddenly I started and listened. There was a peculiar dull, rubbing sound to be heard, medified now and then by a rougher one, as if bootheels were knocked together. I aprang out

BY BURR THORNBURY.

I had gone up to B—— from the city to stay over Sunday at the house of a relative, it within in a fine old country mansion, a short distance from the country-seat. My cousin's the stay over Sunday at the house of a relative, it was the form the country-seat and two children, a son and daughter—the son being away at the time and not expected hack for some days. The borough had been some of recent depredations by burglers, and I found the yood citienen in a rather uncomfortable state of excitement in regard to the matter. My relatives, living seconewhat isolated, and in a dwelling which from its appearance would materially be supplemented by the supplemented with the pisto when the seat of year and its and jewelly as anything, they being old and valued friends of the family.

On the evening of my arrival, one of these safety of themselves and property than was an excessively as anything, they being old and valued friends of the family.

On the evening of my arrival, one of these ladies, while walking in the grounds about the replying in the negative to his inquiry, by making a remark or two, in order that the might obtain a better view of him, to said the replying in the negative to his inquiry, by making a remark or two, in order that the might obtain a better view of him, to said the replying in the negative to his inquiry, by making a remark or two, in order that the might obtain a better view of him, to said the replying in the negative to his inquiry, by making a remark or two, in order that is might obtain a better view of him, to said the replying in the negative to his inquiry, by making a remark or two, in order that is might obtain a better view of him, to said the proposition of a chort hadder, or by dimning a tree that atool sear the western of the house, he informed the through the house of effecting are missed to while a disturb the family, and him the proposition of effective proposition of effective proposition of the controlled of effecting are missed, the feating of the city a soft and listened. There was a peculiar dull, rubbing sound to be heard, modified now and then by a rougher one, as if boot heels were knocked together. I apraug out of bed, went to the window and looked out. The branches of the tree that stood near the piazza were slightly moving, though I was sure there was no wind. Some one was climbing the tree. I was sure of it. I went to my pillow and returned with the piatol. When I roached the window one bough of the old maple was more agitated than ever, and amid the foliage I saw a human figure slowly making its way toward the roof of the piazza. I waited till the person, with an particular caution, had reached it, and was making his way toward my window. I hate midnight prowlers—I prefer day time highway men—and have no compunctions against shooting them. This fellow was intent on cowardly plundering, and he should suffer for it. I raised my pistel and took deliberate afm at him—not at his heart, but at his right leg, for I did not wish to kill him, but to wound and frighten him—when he turned his face toward the moonlight—and—heavens! I saw it was the son of my heat! I made myself known to him immediately, raised the window and let him in, and informed him what my intentions for a time were rather mixed; he declared he would rather lose his heart than his leg (I found out afterward the former was gone already—pretty Mirs Martyn had it) and ended in acknowledging he deceived to be shot for attempting to enter the house in that manner, though he had done it before. He had returned accorner than he expected, and not wishing to reach his room in the way he had done en previous occasions, came near being shot for his considerateness. We were soon in bed together, and nothing further occurred to distarb my slumbers.

In the morning, when the event of the might was related, the feelings of the other members of the household may be, as a handy old phrase has it, "better imagined than described." We were profoundly thankful that the result was not a serious one.

of the affine.

In conclusion I say that these were mainty approach for our appealession of robbery that night, for the residence of Judge 8—in the becaugh was broken into, and the bid Judge, who was placed in a new relation wite criminals, frightened half to death in a remonitre with the thieres, though he respected in getting the best of them in a very blundering way. A pistel shot intended for the intraders struck a "pallid bast of Pallasist above his chamber does," and becapit the image down with medi an alarming racket, that the burglars fied after returning a harmiese complimentary fire.

The village has sizes been remarkably exempt from midnight depredators, a tradition of the inhabitants being in an unusual state of armed readiness perhaps prevailing among the fraternity of burglars.

A Courageous Girl.

Our heroine lived in Bartlett, New Hamp-shire, and was a descendent of the old Crawfords. Her father was a Crawford, and followed the profession of guide among Crawfords. Her father was a Crawford, and followed the profession of guide among the mountains.

Her name was Bessie, and she was the only daughter remaining at home, a darkeyed, brown-haired girl, of slight but compact frame, just entering her nineteenth year. Her mother had been dead several year, and upon her develved the whole care of the household.

One day, late in summer, Mr. Crawford weak with a party of travellers away to the headwaters of one of the many mountain streams that enter the Baco, and Bessie was left alone. Even the dogs had gone with the pleasure seekers.

Near the middle of the afternoon, while the girl was sitting by the open window, a man came up from the road and asked her if she would give him a drick of water.

Boasie had seen the man before, and did not like his looks. He was a slout, broadshouldered, fill-favored fellow, and the bits of moss and spikes of the pines upon his clothing indicated that he had slept in the woods.

But Ressie did not hesitate. She laid or moss and space of the bad slept in the woods.

But Bessie did not hesitate. She laid aside her work and went to get the water. When she came back the man had entered the room.

She did not like this, for she was sure he had come in by the window; but she handed him the dipper without remark. The man drank, and then set the dipper on the table. Then he turned upon the girl and drew a broad-bladed knife from his pocket.

"Look ye, my young lady," he said, "I know there's money in this house, and I know you are alone. Blow me where the money is! If you don't I shall kill you, and then hunt it up myself! I'm in carness, and there ain't no time to waste. Don't make a fuse, for if you do, you'll feel this knife quick."

Bessie shrank back and looked into the there sin't no time to waste. Don't make a fuss, for if you do, you'll feel this knife quick."

Bessie shrank back and looked into the man's face, and could see that he meant just what he said.

If I show you the drawer where the money is, will you promise not to do me harm?"

"Show me honest, and I wont harm you."

"Then come with me."

Bessie led the way to a small bedroom on the ground floor, where there was an old mabogany bureau, the upper drawer of which she unlocked. The man, when he saw this, thicking, doubtless, that Crawford's gold was within his grasp, shut up his knife and put it into his pocket.

The girl opened the drawer, and quick as thought, drew forth a large navy revolver, ome with which she herself had killed a trapped bear, and cocked it.

"Villain!" she exclaimed, planting her back against the wall, and siming the weapon at his bosom, "many a wild beast have I shot with this good pistol, and I'll shoot you if you don't instantly leave this house! I will give you not even a second. Start, or I fire!"

The ruffian could read human looks as well as the maiden, and he could read very plainly in the firm-set lips and in the flashing eyes—but more clearly in the steady hand which held the pistol—that she would not only fire, as ahe had promised, but her aim would be a sure and fatal one.

And he backed out from the bedroom, backed into the eitting room—then leaped from the window and disappeared.

Bessie kept ber pistol by her side until ber father and his guests came home; and when she had told her story, search was made for the ruffian. But he was net to be found. Our beroise had so thoroughly frightened him that he never came that way again.

RAISHAS IN CALIFORNIA.—The drying of RAISINS IN CALIFORNIA.—Ine drying of grapes, for making raisins, is becoming a large industry in California, the highly eachatine juice of the grapes grown there—all European varieties—peculiarly fitting them for the purpose.

gy A QUERY.—Somebody wants to know whether the peculiar walk of a drum-major is due to his being so very band-y.

BECEIPTS.

A TRIFLE.—One quart of milk, six eggs, reserving the whites of two, which beat to a stiff froth, and when the milk boils drop in in spoonsful; in a minute or two remove carefaily to a plate; after heating the eggs light pour the boiling milk slowly into the egg, stirring the egg quickly the while; sweeten it and place over the fire, stirring all the time until it simmers—it must not boil. If it should cardle pour it immediately into another pan and sir until cool.

Place sponge cake, moistened with Madeira wine (and on which preserved strawberries or other fruit has been spread,) in the bottom and sides of a glass or China bowl, and when the custard is cool, flavor with vanilla, and pour into the bowl, placing the white helic carefully on the top; then surround the bowl with ice, or stand it in cold water until required.

CRAMBERRY AND RICE JELLY.—Boil and press the fruit, strain the juice, and, by degrees, mix into it as much ground rice as with, when boiled, thicken to a jelly; boil it gently, stirring it, and sweeten it to your tests. Pat it in a basin or form, and serve with cream.

CRABBERRY JELLY.—Make a very strong isinglase jelly. When cold, mix it with a double quantity of cranberry juice. Sweeten and boil it up; then strain it into a shape. The sugar must be good lanf, or the jelly will not be clear.

ORANGE WATER ICE.—Proceed exactly as in making lemon water ice.

ORANGE WATER ICE.—Proceed exactly as AGRICULTURAL.

I would contion these who tenis or me because against crediting the lil-will of the unitsal. Many think they are doing facely, and are proud of their success in home tenising by means of severe whipsics, or otherwise rousing and atimulating the passions, and these, from necessity, evolving the will, through which the resiston in the same that and there is nothing that or fully or hibits the ability, judgment and shill of the real horse men as the case and tool displayed in winning instead of repelling the action of the mind. Although it may be necessary to use the will so believe, and great ours should be taken not to rouse the passions or exhibits the will to obtained.

I have known many borses of maturally gestile character to be spelled by being whipped once; and one house that was made vicious by being struck with a wide once, while standing in his stall.

Remember, the whip must be used with great care, or it is liable to do mischief, and may cause irreparable injury.—Prof. Manger on the Education of Horses.

Tomate Trellie

The chespest and most convenient trailits for tematoes is to make a feur-square frame for every hill, of four pieces of hard wood, two fees long and one inch square, for the four corner poets. Lest these pieces of lath, each one feet long, be nailed do each side. Such trellines will cost only a few cents cach, and they will save four times their cost in the value of tematoes. Let men a trellis be placed over each hill before the plant has begun to bend sideways, then the fruit will all be kept off the ground. If made of durable timber, and curvally supred during winter in a pile on one side of the field, this kind of trellis will has thalf a spee of years or more, especially if they are dipped in a lettle of coal tar before they are to be placed over the tomato hills.

Items. —Veal calves and shoep, when taken to market, are often tied with a rope, bedded in the flesh of their delicate limbs, and then thrown brutally late a wagen, and left to lie upon each other fluing a long title. Are they not flesh and blood? Can they not feel?

feel?

—Cabbage, as in fact all other garden plants, should have plenty of rich manure to insure their rapid growth, and to render them tender and juicy.

—An honestly made superphosphate of lime is a good article and a good fertilizer, and the failures in the use of it are due to the impurity of the article or adulterations in the manufacture.

THE RIDDLER.

Enlema.

Emigram.

I am composed of 30 letters.

My 3, 20, 26, 5, 7, 4, 8, signifies dexterity.

My 1, 2, 6, 13, is what many suffer from a
My 18, 9, 27, 24, 29, 30, is a French phrase often used in describing fashions.

My 19, 11, 10, is a process hides undergo to become leather.

My 28, 14, 25, 22, 15, is a word signifying extreme pain.

My whole is the name of a distinguished
American at one of his most important battles.

BOZ.

Charade.

Safe on a fair one's arm my first may rest, And raise no tumult in a husband's breast; To those who neither creep, nor run, nor fly, The want of legs my second will supply. My whole's a rival of the fairest toast, And when I'm liked the best I suffer most.

A girl's name.

One of the beavenly bodies.
A sound indicating pain.
A girl's name.

The words can be spelled both dewn and
J. T. DODSON.

Probability Problem. A gambler throws an unknown number of ice. What is his chance of turning up 24? ARTEMAS MARTIN. McKean, Eric Co., Pa.

Commercians.

Why is it easy to break into an old man's house? Ans.—Because his gait is broken and his locks are few.

The property of the separate he most sagacious of travellers? Ans.—Because he never takes his eye off his brank.

The why is a sword like beer? Ans.—Because it's no use till it's drawn.

The why is a man practising a "peculiar branch of surgery" altied to a wissrd? Ans.—Because one is a cupper, the other a soroerer.

Because one is a cupper, the other a sorcerer.

BY How do we know Moses were a wig?
Ans.—Because he was sometimes seen with Aaron, and sometimes without 'air on.
[Ah, now we are speaking Aaronically.]

What is the difference between the Prince of Wales, an orphan, a baid-headed old man, and a gorilia? Ans.—The first is an heir apparent, the second has ne'er a parent, the third has no bair apparent, and the fourth has an hairy parent?

Why is blindman's-buff like sympathy? Ana.—Because is's a fellow feeling for another.

[By all means encourage a fellow feeling in your breast, but a fellow feeling in your breast doesn't deserve any sympathy, as pur-robber-bly he would be a thief!]

Aprise toy should be given to the child who guesses the following: What kin is that child to its ewn father who is not his own father's son? Ans.—His daughter.

The Dick's father is Tom's sea, what relation is Dick to Tom? Ana.—Tom is his grandfather.

What is that which flice without wings? Ans.—An arrow.

Answers to Last.

ENIGMA—"If you do love me you will and me out. WORD SQUARE—

R I N G

I D E A

N E A T

G A T E

A shrill old lady in Memphin, when-ever she looses her someors, rouses the whole family with—"Where's them shears ap-peared to?"

DOME